Bayonets Halt Groups as Olson Refuses to Call Assembly.

"Langer Session" Is Unorganized

"Miniature Civil War" Prevails, Federal Agent Declares.

Bismarck, N. Dak., July 20 (AP).—Doors of the North Dakota State House were locked today in the face of 500 marching farmers who came to ask Acting Gov. Ole H. Olson to "clean up" the chaos caused by the recent ousting of Gov. William Langer by the State Supreme Court.

Accompanied by a band, the petitioners were halted at the steps of the Capitol by bayonets of the National Guard, called out by Langer in an effort to maintain his position despite the Supreme Court's decree, but since then obedient to the orders of Olson, designated by the court as chief executive of the State.

Olson received a committee of four marchers, who asked him to call a special session of the Legislature which would replace the current session called by Langer from the place where he went in hiding after hearing the will of the court. Olson refused to do so.

Legislature Uncertain.

"Langer's session" of the Legislature was in complete uncertainty. The House of Representatives, which organized yesterday but was ignored by Olson, held another session. The Senate, still far shy of a quorum, heard several speeches but had not organized itself like the House.

"No one realizes more than I do the situation which now confronts us," Olson told the marchers' committee.

Saying he never believed he could find himself involved in so much turmoil, the dirt farmer who challenged Langer's authority to govern after the latter's conviction and sentence on Federal charges of defrauding the Government, told the committee he had sworn to uphold the State and Federal Constitutions. That, he said, he would do.

The committee was headed by J. H. Miller, of Bismarck, one of the leaders of men on Federal relief who declared a strike several days ago. Langer had told them to "raise more hell" if they wanted to realize their demands of cash relief.

Called Civil War.

Authorities said some Communists were members of the Farmers United League, which, with the Farmers Holiday Association, paraded to the Statehouse.

A regional relief officer described the situation here as a "miniature civil war." Another Federal representative declared the State would get no further Federal highway funds until an Olson appointee became highway commissioner.

Langer supporters, it was reported, fearful they would be unable to muster a quorum in the Senate of the Langer-called Legislature, sought Olsen's support. They prom-

Paris Asks Aid Of Doumergue

Premier Asked to Calm Storm After Heated Cabinet Session.

Paris, July 20 (AP).—Fatherly Gaston Doumergue, who six months ago pulled France from the verge of civil war, was called upon today to make a supreme effort to hold his strife-torn "truce cabinet" together.

After a heated session of the cabinet today, Henry Cheron, minister of justice, sped by automobile to the aged premier in Tournefuelle to ask him to pour oil on the political storm stirred up by Andre Tardieu's charges that Camille Chautemps forged his name to a Stavisky check stub.

Tardieu and Edouard Herriot, both ministers in the truce cabinet and former premiers, stuck to their guns during today's cabinet session, which discussed the former's accusations against Herriot's fellow-member of the radical Socialist party.

At the conclusion of a half hour's talk, which showed no signs of peaceful termination, the ministers decided to ask Doumergue to mediate.

Herriot was understood to have maintained a threat to resign if Tardieu does not retract his charge that radical Socialist governments knew Serge Stavisky was a swindler before his Bayonne municipal pawnshop collapsed.

Associated Press Photos.

London, July 20 (AP).—New charges of misconduct during recent months were made today against Douglas Fairbanks, sr., and Lady Sylvia Ashley on behalf of Lord Ashley, who is suing for a divorce from his former chorus girl wife.

The allegation was made that the famous motion picture actor and Lady Ashley, who now are in Monte Carlo, continued misconduct at "various places and various dates," which are cited, since Fairbanks was first named as corespondent in the case on February 5.

Lord Ashley's lawyers explained that the new petition brings the case "up to date," and will be treated with the original documents as a whole when the case comes to trial in October.

The supplementary petition will be held secret until the verdict in

Probers Start Move to Aid Phone Users

By Robert C. Albright.

The first Federal move for more equitable and uniform telephone rates was made yesterday by the telephone division of the new Communications Commission, as the Government's investigation of the far-flung telephone monopoly formally got under way.

Phone companies were ordered to file within 40 days schedules of long-distance charges between different points on their own systems and over connecting systems of other interstate lines.

Aimed primarily at the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its affiliates, which Congress specifically directed the commission to probe, three orders were issued. They seek data on rates, contracts and corporate connections.

Complete Rate Picture.

"This should give us a complete rate picture of the telephone map of the country," said Commissioner Paul A. Walker, chairman of the division, who lost no time in getting his inquiry under way.

"We will need other information, of course, such as detailed reports on income. All of the data will have to be checked over by our accountants. With the rate picture and the income picture complete, we should be in position to determine whether telephone charges are 'fair and reasonable.'"

Mr. Walker said the commission ultimately will undertake valuation studies of its own. He predicted the first will take the form of estimates, owing to the long, drawn-out nature of an intensive valuation inquiry.

Peering behind the scenes of the vast corporate network of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and other phone systems, the second of the three orders called for verified copies, in duplicate, of all "contracts, agreements, or arrangements."

Through this order the commission expects to determine to what extent and at what cost the so-called telephone monopolies make

Attack Suspect Jailed; Mob Forms

Alabama Coed Outruns Her Assailant.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., July 20 (U.P.).—James Banks, middle-aged colored man, was arrested late today on charges of attempting to attack a pretty University of Alabama coed.

Officers said the man confessed. Mary Tate Kicker, 20, who outran Banks after he knocked her down, identified him as her assailant.

A crowd of about 75 men milled about the jail where the man was locked up tonight, but there were no open threats of violence.

Assault Charge Added In St. Louis Killing

St. Louis, July 20 (AP).—A warrant charging common assault was issued here today against Lear B. Reed, a Federal agent, already indicted for manslaughter.

The warrant was issued on complaint of Harry Masterson, husband of Mrs. Bessie Masterson, killed last Friday night by shots fired in a raid, led by Reed, upon the Masterson home. Reed fired several shots through the closed door of the flat. Masterson said Reed struck him on the side of the head with a pistol and knocked him over his wife's body, as the raiders entered his home.

Hosiery Mill Is Given Back Its Blue Eagle

Harriman Settlement by Johnson Aid Draws Labor Protest.

By Frank Getty.

NRA's Blue Eagle was restored officially to the Harriman Hosiery Mills, of Tennessee, yesterday, in the face of vigorous labor objections and charges of "gross betrayal" of a Presidential agreement with the workers.

Terms of the agreement negotiated with the Harriman company by A. R. Glancy, an assistant administrator, were made public at NRA headquarters, with no comment upon the strenuous disapproval voiced by hosiery union leaders.

Contracts which had been held up by the Government were released to the Tennessee mills, and general rejoicing—except on the part of the strikers—was reported from Harriman, where Blue Eagles, removed in sympathy with the walkout, reappeared on window fronts throughout the town.

There was some suggestion in NRA circles last night that Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson might not approve the agreement, although it was generally agreed that Glancy was qualified to act in his chief's absence.

At the same time, NRA notified the Bear Brand Hosiery Co., of Chicago, and the Oil Country Specialties, of Coffeyville, Kans., that they would lose their Blue Eagles on July 23 unless they gave assurance of appropriate restitution for violation of labor guarantees charged by the National Labor Board.

Three other firms, the Algoma Net Co. of Wisconsin, the Rosenbloom-Jasper-Zechowsky Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Annie Gershitz, of Bayonne, N. J., were advised that

Radium to Combat Quintuplet Tumor

Marie Dionne's Birthmark Identified as Growth.

Corbeil, Ont., July 20 (AP).—Radium treatments are planned for Marie, youngest Dionne quintuplet, it was revealed today as what was heretofore thought a birthmark is identified as a tumor.

The baby is suffering no ill effects at present, Dr. A. A. Dafore said. When she grows stronger the treatments may be used as a precautionary measure, to prevent serious effects.

Dr. Dafore said he had recognized the mark as a tumor and had been watching it closely. The identification was revealed today after a visit to the quintuplets by Dr. Thomas S. Cullen, of Johns Hopkins University, and Dr. James S. Freeborn, of Magnetawan, Ont.

Pennsy Pays 6 Million For Electric Engines

New York, July 20 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad has placed orders for 28 electric locomotives to cost more than $6,000,000, it was announced today.

The Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. will build 12 of the new engines, the General Electric Co. 5, and the remaining 11 will be assembled in the railroad company's Altoona plant.

Zaro Agha's Age Probed.

Istanbul, July 20 (AP).—Prof. Dehgjet Sabit announced today that he expected a result from tests made to determine the exact age of the late Zaro Agha within fifteen days. He said reports that the exact age of the Turk, who claimed to have lived 160 years had been established already were inaccurate.

Heat Kills 74 Over Nation; City Swelters

Mercury Records Fall With Plains States Hardest Hit.

Little Relief in Sight as Capital Showers Boost Humidity.

Temperatures yesterday in Washington were:

10 a. m.	83	4 p. m.	94
11 a. m.	83	5 p. m.	95
12 noon	88	6 p. m.	88
1 p. m.	90	7 p. m.	85
2 p. m.	93	8 p. m.	82
3 p. m.	93	9 p. m.	81

A toll of more than 74 deaths over the Nation was recorded last night at close of the second day of the searing heat wave engulfing Washington and the Central Plains between the Appalachian and Rocky Mountains.

Temperature readings well over the 100-degree mark were common throughout the Midwest and in the parched Prairie States the new heat wave intensified the most critical crop condition and water shortage in years, the Associated Press reported.

The sun's merciless rays claimed 24 deaths yesterday and more than 50 were charged to the heat the day before. Six died in Chicago yesterday, one in Joliet, Ill., seven in Nebraska, two in Kansas, one in New York, five in Iowa and two in Minnesota.

No Relief in Sight.

Continuation of the heat wave was forecast by the U. S. Weather Bureau last night. The maximum yesterday was 94 at 2 p. m., while the humidity ranged from 79 at 8 a. m., to 41 at 2 p. m.

Two tantalizing showers offered only momentary relief from the blistering heat. One started at 10 a. m., and the other at 2 p. m., but each lasted only 10 minutes.

By contrast, Washingtonians felt cool when they read of temperatures of 113 at Pierre, S. Dak., and Leavenworth, Kans., 112 at Carlinville, in southern Illinois; 110 at Columbia, Mo., and at Ottumwa, Iowa; Lafayette, Ind., had 106; Springfield, Ill., 105, and St. Louis, 107.9, a record since 1870.

Lake Breezes Help.

A gentle lake breeze cut temperatures in Chicago after the hottest night of the city's summer. Another bit of weather luck went to Minnesota cities where the day dawned cooler. Elsewhere, however, the day duplicated Thursday's discomforts and ravages.

Guarded forecasts by the Weather Bureau said it would be "generally fair and warm" in the Central Plains and the Great Lakes States, with prospects of some scattered local showers today.

In Galena, Ill., beleagured citizens took temperature readings in the shade and found it to be 100 degrees even there. Still, this was four points lower than Thursday.

Nebraska, Kansas, Illinois and Missouri simmered under 100-degree temperatures even before noon, after a torrid night of discomfort.

Strikers Stumped By Boss' Offer They Run Plant

Manorville, Pa., July 20 (AP).—The 50 striking workers of the National Mirror Specialty Co. are in a quandary.

A committee of five marched into the office of Leon H. Samuels, owner, and demanded an eight-hour day, a five-day week and a minimum wage of 30 cents an hour.

"Tell you what, I'll do," the "boss" replied. "I'll turn the plant over to you. You do the managing, fix the hours of work, take your wages cut of the profits and pay me a salary as a salesman."

After a hurried conference the workers said they didn't have sufficient managerial experience.

"Then how do you expect a man with experience to do something you can't do?" asked Samuels.

The committee hied to Pittsburgh to consult Ernest C. Dunbar, mediator of the regional labor board, and now he's trying to settle the difficulties.

Police Gunfire Mows Down Minneapolis Truck Strikers; 1 Dead, 50 Hurt; Call Troops

Seattle Dock Strikers Gassed

Tear gas repelled rioters Wednesday when 1,200 of them rushed 300 guards at Pier 41, Seattle, where nine vessels were being loaded by nonunion longshoremen. Mounted police are shown herding rioters back under a bridge leading to the pier.

3,400 Soldiers Ordered Into Tense City After Battle.

Declaring Martial Law Is Considered

Employers Reject U. S. Program to Settle Walkout.

Minneapolis, July 20 (AP).—An ominous tenseness pervaded Minneapolis tonight as an aftermath of a stubborn battle between striking truck drivers and police convoying a truckload of merchandise in which one man was killed and 50 wounded.

A military censorship immediately clamped down over the identity of the dead man and his affiliation as well as another said by Adjt. Gen. E. A. Walsh to have been wounded probably fatally near the Closum Bergum Co., when strike pickets attacked a police-escorted truck in defiance of union orders that no trucks move.

Walsh's guardsmen moved in force into the contested area near the Market Place, where two special police were killed in the 11-day strike of truck drivers last May.

Martial Law Considered.

Thirty-four hundred guardsmen were ordered into the city. Gov. Floyd B. Olson, who has tried since the walkout Monday night to settle the strike, considered declaring martial law.

"The National Guard can either aid civil authorities in maintaining law and order or take full responsibility through martial law," Walsh said.

Forty-eight men, several of them merely spectators of the vicious clash between strikers and police, were taken to hospitals with wounds. Thirty-five others nursed beaten heads.

Two policemen, Sergt. Austin Brannon, 58, and Patrolman John Green, were among the casualties. Brannon was slugged. Green was shot in the leg.

Machine gun companies, moving under orders of Walsh, took command of the area and cleared it.

U. S. Mediators at Work.

Federal mediators, the Rev. Francis Haas and E. H. Dunnigan, framed a tentative outline on which they hoped to build a final agreement terminating the walkout.

It embraced classification of market firms and all other industries into two separate groups; provision for a definite wage scale, and authority of the union, No. 574, affiliated with the American Federation o Labor, to represent workers in individual plants in collective bargaining if the plant's employes desired.

The employers' advisory committee turned down the proposal and mediators sought another conference with them. The plan has not been submitted to the strikers.

Shooting broke out almost simultaneously on two fronts, concealing for a time the fact that there were two distinct battles beween police, ordered by Chief of Police Michael Johannes to shoot if necessary, and strikers.

Battle With Police.

Police lines had been formed a block from the Slocum Bergen Co., whence the truck of merchandise had started to move about 2 p. m.

It was just under way with its convoy of police in automobiles when a small truck, jammed with strikers, rushed up. Defying police who ordered them back, the attackers climbed upon the vehicle.

Shots were fired into the air. Another burst, lower and directly into the mob, was the signal for general firing by the authorities. Simultaneously, a block away, police guns spoke when a crowd of demonstrators there sought to break through the lines.

Four persons, police said, fell wounded in the second outburst.

Meanwhile, two strikers climbing upon the truck, dropped off, blood dripping from wounds. Others, in a nearby crowd, standing fast despite orders to fall back, stumbled and staggered as leaden pellets found their bodies, the shots ricocheting from sidewalk and street.

Policeman Wounded.

Ambulances screamed to the scene where the truck, standing amid the disorder that brought wounds to at least six more, was still under control of its driver and one guard inside the cab.

Fists flailing and clubs flying, the strikers sought to drive off onrushing police. Some were captured and placed under technical arrest.

Sergt. Brannon, who leaped upon the strikers' truck, was slugged by its occupants. Whether he was shot by guns fired by fellow officers was not immediately ascertained. Several policemen said they were convinced he had been wounded; others said he merely had been slugged.

Firm Dockmen Assert Strike Will Continue

Johnson Seeks Arbitration as Flood of Produce Reaches Frisco.

San Francisco, July 20 (AP).—Contending their position was stronger than ever, the maritime unions announced today the waterfront strike would continue, in a statement by the joint strike committee, of which Harry Bridges, militant strike leader, is chairman.

"Our position is fortified by the show of strength from the rest of organized labor and by the fact that the working men and women in this city refuse to be browbeaten by a group of unjust, misled employers," the statement said.

Powerful Government agencies, with NRA Administrator Hugh S. Johnson acting as their spokesman, continued work in San Francisco on efforts to bring shippers and maritime workers under arbitration.

The rest of the San Francisco metropolitan area meanwhile was returning to normal.

Johnson Pushes Arbitration.

Gen. Johnson, whose call upon San Francisco labor leaders to call off the general strike of nearly 100,000 workers was followed in 24 hours by abandonment of the mass walkout and a stampede of union men back to work, pledged every effort to bring the underlying trouble to arbitration.

As Wagner arrived here, Johnson left for Los Angeles. The NRA administrator said he expected an answer in the southern city tonight from the shipowners as to whether they would submit the water front strike trouble to arbitration. Johnson said he would return to San Francisco tomorrow.

The joint marine strike committee representing Coast longshoremen and maritime workers, in formally declaring its continued walkout, expressed its "sincere appreciation to the entire labor movement for its tremendous show of unity." It scathingly attacked the San Francisco Industrial Association, which fostered the nonunion movement of cargo from strike-bound piers here, and said, "The mass strike here and the united sympathy of the public at large with the strikers has proved conclusively that this city will not stand for an organization such as the industrial association, whose only aim is to destroy, * * * regardless of the monetary cost and

Civilian Raids Army Post to Free Convict

Private With Shotgun Is Forced to Let Pair Escape in Boat.

New York, July 20 (AP).—An armed civilian "raided" the Governors Island Army post today and aided a prisoner whose original one-year sentence had been boosted to five for previous escapes.

Melvin Blanton, of Camden, Ohio, the prisoner, was working with two other inmates of the disciplinary barracks when his accomplice pulled up in a rowboat at the nearby shore.

Private Steven A. Gorzegorek, guarding the prisoners with an automatic shotgun, gave no heed to the approaching boatman, assuming him to be a laborer, until he drew a pistol and told the sentry

"Drop that gun and don't make a sound or you'll get hurt."

Gorzegorek gave up his weapon the civilian handed it to Blanton. Two unarmed soldiers reached the scene just then in a truck followed by two Civilian Conservation Corps workers in an automobile.

Blanton and his aid cowed the five with their guns, then dashed to the boat and rowed for the Brooklyn shore.

The sentry drove to headquarters and reported the break. New York police were notified and immediately searched the Brooklyn water front, but found no trace. They learned later the pair had hailed a taxicab and calmly ridden away.

The two prisoners with Blanton made no effort to escape.

Governors Island, a half mile from the southern tip of Manhattan, is headquarters for the Army Second Corps Area. The Sixteenth Regiment Infantry is stationed there.

Blanton was convicted of deserting the Army four years ago and sentenced to one year at Fort Thomas, Ky. He escaped but was recaptured and sent to Fort Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis, Ind., with added time on his sentence.

When he was caught after a second escape, he was sent to Governors Island.

Austrians Urge Return of King

Monarchists Make Plea as Terrorism Gains Wider Scope.

Vienna, July 20 (AP).—In the midst of bombings and other forms of terrorism, monarchists today published a strong appeal to Chancellor Dollfuss for quick restoration of the monarchy.

The text of the document, which recently was submitted to Dollfuss, charged that a "carmirilla" of high officials around the chancellor is sabotaging all his efforts to build up the country and that the economic plight of the country is "worse than in 1918."

The monarchist charges came as opponents of the government—Nazis or Socialists, or both—were demonstrating again, and more powerfully, that they are not to be suppressed by threats.

Dynamiters wrecked the electric power plant at Reutte in the Tyrol, paralyzing industry over a wide area. Other blasts damaged a priest's home at Fohnsdorf, Styria, shattered church windows in the Tyrol and damaged a railway line at Salzburg.

Seattle Mayor Leads Police In Picket Rout

Seattle, July 20 (AP).—About 2,000 pickets were routed from a strike-blockaded section of the Seattle water front today in a terrific gas attack by 300 policemen personally commanded by Mayor Charles L. Smith. The advance opened a pier for the movement of freight trains.

Hundreds suffered from the great clouds of tear and nausea gas. A score of the police were given emergency treatment, and several were taken to hospitals.

Strikers scattered quickly when the gas barrage reached the height of its intensity. The engagement lasted about 15 minutes. Picket forces made no estimate of their casualties. They cared for their own injured.

12 Are Arrested.

Twelve arrests were made. A man identified as J. Munoz, 49, a seaman, allegedly was carrying a knife. The others were taken in a raid on the Seaman's Union headquarters. No formal charges were filed.

While apparently no one was hurt seriously, virtually all of the 2,300 combatants suffered from the tear and nausea gas, even Mayor Smith.

Seattle's casualty list since the start of the strike May 9 stands at 2 dead, 20 seriously injured, 300 slightly hurt (mostly bruises and cuts from clubs and rocks, and burns from gas bombs) and something over 2,000 gassed.

Today's battle was the answer of the authorities to Wednesday's clash, in which the strike pickets broke through police lines and ganged at the entrances to piers 40 and 41. Because of their location, these piers are easily defended, and likewise easily blocked from the shore side.

Prevented Car Movements.

With pickets in position, freight cars could not be moved to the piers to service the nine ships being loaded or unloaded today by some 450 nonunion longshoremen.

Mayor Smith took over the police force at midnight, relieving Chief of Police George F. Howard from duty, and went to the docks this morning with two police captains. They walked quietly down the picket lines, telling of the proposed gas attack and warning the men to leave before trouble began.

Most of the pickets received the warning in silence. A few adjusted improvised gas masks. One man, who said he was a marine fireman, pointed out to his fellows that "we're greatly outnumbered and should leave." He asked other firemen to go with him.

Some of the pickets joined him and started to leave, but longshoremen in the line shouted to the firemen to "hold your ground!" and the pickets went back into line.

"Let 'er go!" shouted Police Captain Ralph W. Olmstead, and the gas warfare began.

At the height of the battle some 200 bombs were exploding on all sides, with detonations audible a Buffalo, W. Va., July 20 (U.P.).—Drawn into deep water by the suction of a passing towboat, three children drowned in the Ohio River here. They were May Sanders, 8; Raymond Sanders, 5, a brother, and Esta Criner, 15, a cousin.

Man Blinded by Thugs Picks Out Guilty Pair From Voices

Before him stood six men, three city detectives and three robbery suspects. No names were mentioned, but each man was given a number, 1 to 6.

The man in the chair was asked by a police officer if he could identify, through the voice, the men who tortured him in a raid on his bowling alley last April. Stratigos' eyes were all right then, but the thugs stabbed him in the eyes and he will be blind the rest of his days.

Each of the men in the line-up was asked a question, detectives, as well as suspects.

As two of the men answered the queries, Stratigos turned and said:

"Yes—those are the men."

The process was changed, the line-up mixed and different questions asked. Each time Stratigos picked out the same two.

The pair, giving the names of John Arendash and Nick Derembels, both of Homestead, Pa., were held for further investigation. They had been arrested as robbery suspects.

Stratigos recalled that one of the gunmen, just before the attack on him which netted loot of $15, had shoved a pistol into his back and said:

"Come on, George, into the back room."

Stratigos said he could never forget that voice.

died down and the National Guard moved in, than taxicabs, which, up until today had been permitted to operate together with ice, beer and gasoline trucks, were ordered off the streets by strikers.

Strikers usurped complete control of the situation about their headquarters, threatening police on nearby corners where they had been directing traffic, and ordering them to leave. Strikers then directed traffic themselves.

Five ambulances went to strike headquarters to remove the wounded to regular hospitals. Most of the injured strikers were shot in the arms and legs. Buckshot peppered the back of Nels Nelson, however, and his condition was described as critical at General Hospital.

mile away. Bombs were thrown from the Garfield street viaduct above the pier entrance, and by mounted police who charged into the picket lines, swinging their clubs.

Although the battle covered about two city blocks, the worst of it was over in a quarter of an hour. Strikers and officers fell by scores, bent double by cramps from the nausea gas.

Puffs of white tear gas spouted in irregular pattern, while streamers of the gas occasionally criss-crossed as pickets seized upon the bombs and threw them back at the police.

Fire hose had been laid, but it was not needed. The gas was enough. The retreating pickets dragged away their comrades, and police ambulances picked up the others.

A few minutes later, the freight cars were moving.

Vice Is Linked To Defendants In Swindle Suit

Court Orders Graham to Testify on Business Done by Company.

New York, July 20 (AP).—Over vigorous objections of defense counsel, a Federal court jury heard today that James C. McKay and William J. Graham, Nevada political powers, were financially interested in Reno's notorious stockade.

McKay and Graham, accused of directing an international swindle ring, are being tried on charges of using the mails to defraud.

Full disclosure of their interest in the stockade followed Judge Carroll C. Hincks' taking a hand in the questioning of Graham.

McKay testified yesterday that he owned stock in the Riverside Securities Co., which later changed its name to Acme Co. Graham, next on the stand, also admitted his interest in the corporation.

Defense objections were sustained to disclosing the nature of the company's business until George Pfann, assistant U. S. district attorney, explained he was seeking to attack the credibility of the two defendants' testimony, most of which was devoted to denials of Government evidence.

"The business of women and dance halls," Graham finally said in answer to the question.

"Is the Ace Co. the owner of real estate?" the judge asked.

"Yes, land and lots of houses. It runs dance halls and houses. * * * It is to keep the district away from the residential section."

Pfann's questioning of Graham revealed the witness owned between 25 and 30 per cent of the company's stock.

Food by Mail Sent Beseiged Workers

Kohler Strikes Protest, but to No Avail.

Kohler, Wis., July 20 (AP).—Officials of the Kohler Co. plant said today they ha dbeen obtaining food for the 150 employes beleaguered by strike pickets by sending packages through the United States mails.

Although the blockade now in its fifth day has been almost 100 per cent effective, strikers today permitted a coal car to enter the company yards, assuring Kohler Cillage a water supply for several days. The plumbing equipment manufacturing plant, headed by former Gov. Walter J. Kohler, supplies the "model" village with water.

Strikers appealed to the Rev. J. W. Maguire, Federal mediator, when they learned foodstuffs were being sent into the besieged plant in a postal truck, but the priest replied he knew nothing they could do to prevent it. Pickets then appealed, without success, to Postmaster Frank Scherer.

Taking 47-Ton Stone for a Ride

Handled as surely as though it were a toy block, this 94,000-pound slab of Indiana limestone was hoisted and placed in the south pediment of the new Archives Building yesterday. It is the largest single piece of stone to be used in the monumental edifice. It took 15 men to rig up, level, plumb and maneuver the slab into position. The stiff-leg derrick, shown above, did the rest.

Oil Companies Dare Portland Strikers' Ire

Portland, Oreg., July 20 (AP).—All major oil companies began a determined effort today to end the motor fuel drought in Portland and started 19 gasoline tank trucks, under heavy police guard, from the strike-bound water front to filling stations.

It was the second step to unloose the strike bonds that for more than two months have held the harbor helpless. Earlier today cargo was worked on a vessel in the downtown water front area, and steamship companies said all service would be on schtdule before Monday.

On each tank truck a policeman or deputy sheriff rode as a passenger. Other officers in police cars escorted the procession.

Scores of pickets, mainly from the ranks of striking water front workers, were along the highway, keeping the vigil they had maintained for nearly 10 weeks. They were observed during the morning hours piling stones along the Linnton road.

Guardsmen Are Encamped.

Behind the group of convoying police stood the threat that should any disturbance occur it would be quelled by National Guardsmen, camped more than 1,000 strong within a ten-minute run of Portland.

The convoyed expedition frankly was a test push through picket lines which heretofore had successfully prevented movement of any of the 18,000,000 gallons of gasoline stored in the Linton plants.

Oil companies announced that if the attempt was successful, the process would be repeated until the tank of every service station in the city had been filled.

Until today not more than 2 out of 100 stations have been able to meet the requirements of motorists. For a week the city had suffered a gasoline famine. tI waited tensely for the break in its strike impasse.

Two Horns of Dilemma.

One one side, military intervention was threatened in case of any overt act. On the other, labor threatened a general strike n event the 1,100 National Guardsmen mobilized last night by Gov. Julius Meier are posted on the strike-bound waterfront.

Both sides, in their search for industrial peace in the ten-weeks' old walkout of unionized marine workers, fixed their hopes upon action by President Roosevelt's longshore arbitration board in San Francisco.

Without the assistance of National Guards, police and sheriff's deputies provided a guard today for the loading of millions of feet of railroad ties for China.

Loading of the steamer San Julian was the first real attempt to break the harbor strike that has tied up commerce here for 73 days.

Strike Pickets Moved.

About 90 police officers guarded the dock, near the city center, and moved a crowd of about 150 maritime union strike pickets a block and a half from the piers.

Acting immediately on the basis the port will be opened, the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. announced it will dispatch the steamer America to Portland from San Francisco tomorrow to load 12,000 tons of cargo for the East Coast.

A minor blast occurred shortly after midnight in the area in which the tie-loading operations were being conducted today. The bombing was attributed to the labor strife.

Members of the strike strategy committee gathered in a long secret session. Labor leaders, even the most conservative, expressed themselves as indignant over the troop mobilization. The committeemen said the Governor was allowing himself to be "used" by the shippers.

Immigration Law No Check To Gangsters

Alien Agitators Can Be Deported, but Many Loopholes Exist.

(United Press.)

Federal immigration laws, although sufficient flexible to form an active weapon against Pacific Coast aliens found guilty of participation in radical agitation and Communistic disturbances, are not at present adequate to curb activities of gangsters, racketeers and other criminals.

Experts in the immigration service are so emphatic in this belief that they sponsored an aggressive campaign during the last Congress to bring about an amendment of the laws. Their efforts failed.

The Government can and will deport West Coast aliens responsible for inciting riots, provided they have entered the United States unlawfully; have been engaged in active opposition to organized government, or are found guilty of teaching Communism or of crimes involving moral turpitude. Yet, because of loopholes in immigration laws, it must permit certain aliens who are habitual criminals to remain in the country, even though they may have been convicted 25 times.

Reporting to Congress recently, Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization D. W. McCormick said the failure to make greater headway in ridding the country of alien criminals "has given rise at times to serious criticism on the part of those unfamiliar with the technicalities and loopholes in the existing law which permit undesirable aliens to evade deportation."

A typical case is that of an alien who liver 27 years in the United States. He spent ten years and three months in penal institutions, serving six sentences for grand larceny, attempted robbery, attempted grand larceny and unlawfully procuring a marriage license. Departation can not be effected under existing law because he has not, since 1917, been convicted of two crimes involving moral turpitude for which he has received a sentence of more than one year.

Another alie nwas convicted 23 times for vagrancy, disorderly conduct and intoxication. In each instance he received a sentence of less than one year, and therefore was not deportable.

Citing another loophole in the immigration laws, MacCormick said that a situation now exists whereby the Government can deport the alien who has been smuggled into the country, but can not deport the alien who smuggled him in.

Rockville Seeks Swimming Pool

Rotary Club Is Sponsoring Municipal Project.

A public swimming pool may be located in Rockville, Md., if plans of the local Rotary Club materialize. A committee of the club is investigating the feasibility of the project. Several sites have been inspected by Porter Ward, F. Barnard Welsh and Sidney Clark on behalf of the club.

Among the locations under consideration is a section of the old Rockville Fair Grounds, now owned by the board of education and soon to have a senior high school erected upon it.

If approved of by the school board, the club plans to have the town surveyor, John McDonald, prepare specifications and a cost schedule. Tentative plans call for a pool 65 by 85 feet with a diving tower and bath houses. An endeavor will be made to have the admission fee as low as possible.

the cost of lives, the rights of American working men."

Employers Are Attacked.

"Our position," said the committee's statement, "is fortified by the show of strength from the rest of organized labor and by the fact that the working men and women of this city refuse to be browbeaten by a group of unjust, misled employers, organized in the form of the Industrial Association of San Francisco."

The statement was signed by Bridges.

The city today had returned virtually to normal, but 2,800 carmen of the Market Street Railway still declared they were on strike because of separate grievances. The 2,500 teamsters went back to their jobs to move everything but waterfront cargo. They arranged to vote tonight on whether to handle goods from the docks.

In Alameda County (Oakland, Berkeley and other cities), where 47,000 organized workers walked out, the mass strike was officially declared off last night and all unions returned to work. The 1,200 teamsters in that area went back to their trucks, but decided to continue refusing to move goods from the piers.

Purpose Held Accomplished.

The Alameda County Central Labor Council, in calling off the mass strike here, declared the general strike had "accomplished its purpose." It pledged continued financial and moral assistance to the longshoremen and marine workers still on strike.

San Francisco labor in abandoning its mass walkout had done likewise.

Business still showed the effect of the walkout in this area. Commission houses found themselves bursting with the flood of produce that rolled into the urban areas as the blockade lifted.

Their business dropped sharply. Apparently the public still was eating food bought in the stampede just before the strike took effect. Oakland commission merchants reported a 35 per cent drop in business.

Commercial leaders said the cost of the strike had been uncounted millions of dollars in San Francisco.

Million a Day Estimated.

A chamber of commerce official said there was no way of computing the loss. Previously the chamber had estimated the cost of the waterfront strike alone at $1,000,000 a day to the port of San Francisco, excluding loss of wages by thousands of men and the slump of business in general outside the immediately affected channels of trade.

Oregon observers estimated the troubles had cost that State $30,000,000.

About 4,500 National Guardsmen remained in control of San Francisco, Oakland and Richmond waterfront areas and Gov. Frank F. Merriam said conditions would have to be "cleared up" before they could be withdrawn.

The death of Joe Ferraria in Oakland today—victim of a flying brick in a melee between police and alleged Communists—brought the total fatalities in Pacific Coast ports to nine since the beginning of the waterfront walkout May 9. Three have died in San Francisco, two each in the Los Angeles and Seattle areas and one at Portland. Hundreds have been injured by bullets, gas and flying missiles.

August Relief Fund $577,000

FERA Jobless Help for District Will Be Apportioned.

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration will give the District $577,042 for unemployment aid in August, Aubrey Williams, acting administrator, announced yesterday.

The District funds will be apportioned among general unemployment relief, transient aid, student aid and research. No provision was made for financing the District Rehabilitation Corporation, through the District may apply for a special grant to set up a working capital.

Maryland will get $1,820,936 and Virginia $726,895 out of a total August allotment of $116,838,937 for the United States.

District families on the relief roll have decreased 9 per cent and obligations incurred fell off 3 per cent in June, as compared with May, the FERA reported.

A general decrease of 2 per cent was reported among families on relief rolls in 143 cities and urban counties.

Williams said that relief grants for most States in the drought area had been increased for August because of the spread of the drought, which now covers 60 per cent of the total farm area of the country.

Old Capitol Hotel To Be Torn Down

The old Capitol Hotel on Thirteenth street, between K and L streets, will be torn down to make way for a three-story Washington Daily News plant, it was announced yesterday. The demolition will begin next week.

The Daily News will spend $500,000 on land, building, and additional machinery. Construction will be directed by William Ginsberg, New York engineer, who erected the New York World-Telegram building. The building will be of a colonial type.

Until eight years ago the Capitol Hotel was known as the Raleigh Manor. It originally consisted of four stores with living quarters above. The site was purchased by the News for $90,000.

Green Terms Sympathetic Strikes Futile

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Hailing the wisdom of organized workers in ending the San Francisco general strike, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, last night issued a formal statement sharply denouncing sympathetic strikes and contending they are doomed to end in defeat.

Mr. Green's statement was regarded here as significant.

If the A. F. of L. president has any influence with the rank and file of organized labor the country over, his statement, it was believed here, might mean the San Francisco walk-out will be the last general strike this country ever will experience.

Meanwhile Administration circles here evidenced a more optimistic feeling over the Pacific Coast labor troubles as a result of the developments of the last 24 hours. But this optimism was offset in part by reports of violence in the Minneapolis truckmen's strike.

Arbitration Progress Made.

Word was received by official quarters that marked progress had been made during the day in winning the consent of the disputants in the longshoremen and maritime union strike to arbitration. The key to the situation, it was reported, was to bring the maritime workers and their employers to an agreement for arbitration.

Mr. Green's statement was expected to have a cooling effect on agitation for a general strike at Portland. So emphatic was the labor chieftain in condemning the use of sympathetic strikes that it is doubtful whether organized labor will engage in another one for many months, irrespective of what the long-term effect of the statement may be.

The A. F. of L. president contended the organized workers of San Francisco "made a grave mistake when they engaged in a sympathetic strike," but they showed "sound, sober judgment and acted wisely when they ordered it officially terminated."

Dangerous Results Seen.

"Workers who are organized into unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor can not afford to engage in a sympathetic strike when such action calls for the violation of contracts arrived at through collective bargaining and involves the possibility of losing all economic gains they may have secured through years of sacrifice and effort," Mr. Green asserted.

"It is a dangerous experimentation, fraught with grave consequences," he continued. "The economic losses which workers sustain when they are compelled to return to work, demoralized and disheartened as a result of the loss of a sympathetic strike can not be adequately appraised.

"No sympathetic strike of any consequence or possessed of any National significance was ever won. To the contrary, the record shows that all experiments of this kind have failed. These are stern facts which all workers who do not see in every strike the possibilities of a political revolution must ultimately learn.

Government Always Wins.

"When a sympathetic strike occurs, the issues primarily responsible for the strike become subordinated and a new conflict arises between those engaged in the strike and governmental authorities. The sympathetic strike is immediately accepted as a challenge to government and because the Government must be supreme, it is compelled to bring all its resources into action. That means that the workers on strike are no longer fighting against the employers who are responsible for creating the original issue which caused the strike, but instead, the fight is between the city, State, and Federal governments on the one side and the strikers on the other.

"Everyone must know and understand that in such a conflict the Government must win; it can not surrender. It must establish its supremacy, and usually the result of such a conflict is that the Government wins, the strikers lose, and the employers against whom the original strike was directed become the beneficiaries.

"Fortunately, the sympathetic strike in San Francisco was terminated before this point was reached. That means that now the organized labor movement in San Francisco and elsewhere can give all support possible to the striking longshoremen and associated organizations, and can demand and require that the differences and disputes responsible for the longshoremen's strike are all submitted to a fair tribunal for final decision and final settlement."

Mrs. Kilburn Hurt In Apartment Fall

Army Officer's Wife in 3-Story Plunge.

Condition of Mrs. Ethel Pullman Kilburn, 52, wife of Capt. C. L. Kilburn, U. S. A., retired, seriously injured yesterday in a fall from the third-floor window of her apartment at 1310 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was reported satisfactory last night at Emergency Hospital.

Mrs. Kilburn suffered a compound fracture of the right ankle, a fracture of the right hip, internal injuries and severe lacerations of the face and head. A sister, Mrs. Gertrude Pullman Evans, with whom she shared the apartment, said Mrs. Kilburn fell while trying to adjust a screen.

Capt. Kilburn, who lives with his mother at 1525 New Hampshire avenue, hastened to his wife's bedside when notified of the accident. They were married in 1914 and separated in 1925. Mrs. Kilburn is a stenographer in the office of the United States Shipping Board.

Duke to Take Loan Protest To Power Body

Company Plans to Seek Hearing to Halt Grant in South Carolina.

The Duke Power Co. announced yesterday it intended to protest to the Federal Power Commission to prevent the Public Works Administration from loaning Greenwood County, S. C., $2,700,000 to build a municipal hydroelectric plant in that textile center.

In a letter to the commission, G. G. Allen, president of the powerful Southern utilities, said his company would seek a hearing to stop the loan, which Administrator Harold L. Ickes announced had been approved yesterday following a hearing before the Power Commission's board of review.

The commission highly favored the county's proposal, saying it would provide cheaper rates to power consumers in the Greenwood area, now being served exclusively by the Duke company.

The power company based its objection on the grounds the Greenwood project would cost more than estimated, that it would creae unfair competion and would not be feasible economically. Beneficiaries of the Duke Endowment, which receives a portion of its income from the power company's earnings, also joined the protest.

ised to forego the rumored plan to impeach State officials who opposed Langer if Olson recognized the Legislature. They declared they would confine the session to emergency and relief legislation.

Olson, however, with the backing of Adj. Gen. Earle Sarles, National Guard commandant, refused to withdraw his order revoking the Legislature call.

A. E. Palen, of St. Paul, regional manager of the Bureau of Public Roads, declared approximately $1,200,000 Federal highway funds due North Dakota would not be released until Olson appointed a man to succeed Frank A. Vogel, convicted with Langer, as Federal highway commissioner. Olson said a new highway head would be named.

T. J. Edmonds, Northwest Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, who characterized the North Dakota situation as a "miniature civil war," said in St. Paul after a trip to Bismarck that "North Dakota is more a Federal dependency than a State."

He said the situation is "exceedingly critical" and that "agitators—most of them Langer supporters"—are attempting to incite farmers to violence. He added that North Dakota has received five times as much Federal aid on the basis of population as any other State.

the case is given, as required by English law.

The petition was composed of approximately 50 pages, listing the charges in detail, it was stated.

(At Monte Carlo, where Fairbanks and Lady Ashley are visiting the latter's sister, it was said today that neither would discuss the supplementary petition.)

Friends of the actor have stated recently that it is "impossible" for him to fight the charge against him in court because of his position in the public eye.

Alexander Korda, British picture producer, said that the actor is expected back here by the middle of next week and that he plans to sail for the United States about August 8.

Shortly after the suit against Lady Ashley was filed, it was reported here that a reconciliation was imminent between Fairbanks and his wife, Mary Pickford, but no move has been revealed in that direction.

Recently Lady Ashley replied when asked about reports that she would marry Fairbanks, "That is not for me to say. I know nothing about it."

Peace Policy May Be Urged

President Has Available Wide Choice of Topics for Hawaii Speech.

Conceding the possibility that President Roosevelt will utilize his visit to Hawaii as a gesture of good will for the entire Pacific, Administration officials yesterday characterized speculation over his forthcoming speech at Honolulu as pure guesswork.

In some quarters it was believed that the President would take advantage of the occasion for an address in which he would extend the olive branch of peace and the "good neighbor" policy already offered South America.

Because radio transmission necessarily would be poor outside Hawaii, however, it was thought probable that the address, if broadcast, would be primarily for local consumption. He made several such speeches on his visit to the West Indies and Cartagena, Colombia.

On the other hand, if he chooses to speak of Pacific affairs, a fertile field for discussion is opened up, including disarmament, China's open door, and Philippine independence. The Honolulu speech is scheduled for July 28, according to the Associated Press.

use of service contracts with affiliated companies in maintaining their organization.

Interlocking Directorates.

The last order was directed at interlocking directorates and corporate associations through ownership of stock. It asked in detail:

1. Names of persons or corporations in which the company owns stock, or in which the company might be interested because of common or interlocking directorates, officers, or for other reasons.
2. Names and addresses of the corporation's officers and directors, together with the names and addresses of any persons or corporations in which the company has any interest.
3. Outstanding capital stock of all other corporations in which the company may be interested, or over which the company exercises some control, with particular reference to such associated companies as "may be engaged in the manufacturing or furnishing of apparatus, equipment or supplies used or useful in operation, maintenance or improvement of telephone systems, or any experimental research or investigation work looking to or contemplating the development or improvement of equipment or apparatus used or useful in the operation, maintenance or improvement of any telephone system which may be subject to the provisions of the communications act of 1934."

Mr. Walker, the former Oklahoma utilities regulator, who heads the new telephone division, commented simply that the orders were "self-explanatory."

Sitting with him at the first formal meeting of the division were Chairman Eugene O. Sykes, of the Communications Commission, and Commissioner Norman Stanley Case, vice chairman of the division.

Scope of Probe.

The scope of the inquiry, as outlined in the first of the three orders sent every telephone carrier yesterday, follows:

"(a) All charges for itself and connecting carriers for interstate and foreign telephone communication.

"(1) between different points on its own system, or

"(2) between points on its own system and points on the system of its connecting carriers, or

"(3) between points on its own system and points on the system of any other carrier subject to this act, when a through route has been established, whether such charges are joint or separate, and showing the

"(b) classifications

"(c) practices, and

"(d) regulations affecting such charges."

The division took under consideration an Interstate Commerce Commission report dealing with rules promulgating a uniform system of accounting for telephone companies. The Interstate Commerce Commission formerly had control of telephone companies.

Protests Recognized.

Modifying former recommendations, the Interstate Commerce Commerce Commission recognized protests filed by 22 State utility commissions against an earlier report. It urged that State commissions be given power to require subdivision of accounts.

In deference to the new Communications Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission issued no formal order, but framed the report so the Communications Commission might make use of the findings.

When the uniform accounting proposals were before the Interstate Commerce Commission, Commissioner Walker represented Oklahoma State interests before the commission.

Contending that the Interstate Commerce Commission report disregarded one of the major contentions of the District Public Utilities Commission—that additions to property should be charged at the cost of production—the local commission immediately served notice on Walker's division that it does not intend to be bound by the accounting recommendations.

In line with a suggestion by Chairman Riley E. Elgen, of the District commission, Commissioner Walker said he intended to take no action on the Interstate Commerce Commission report until every one of the protesting local utility commissions had a chance to be heard.

NRA Gives Harriman Mills' Eagle Back; Labor Protests

their compliance insignia had been revoked for various code violations.

Restoration of the Harriman firm's Blue Eagle brought an end to the hosiery strike as well as to the enforced closing of the plant, where 600 workers found employment. The mills will reopen Monday, and W. M. Hannah, attorney for the strikers, indicated yesterday that despite the vigorous dissatisfaction of union leaders, a majority of the workers probably would agree to the new understanding.

"Betrayal of Agreement."

Officials of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers declared, however, that "without a satisfactory agreement regarding collective bargaining" it constitutes "a gross betrayal of an understanding reached at the White House last March."

A. E. Whitson, Harriman strike leader, telegraphed yesterday to Glancy and George L. Berry, NRA division arbitrators, protesting against the settlement.

"You have now sent a second agreement which means nothing to the strikers, but will foster a feeling that they have not received what you yourself proposed," Whitson said.

He contended the Harriman mills never had recognized collective bargaining rights of labor guaranteed by the recovery act, and urged a conference between mill owners and strike leaders "to work out a satisfactory agreement."

Terms of Accord.

At NRA headquarters, it was pointed out that approval by the strikers of the agreement was not necessary, although desired.

Among the important terms of the agreement, as announced by Glancy, are the following:

The strike is hereby called off.

All picketing, acts of intimidation and coercion shall cease immediately.

The company will not prosecute any case growing out of the strike.

All strikers agree not to institute any suit against the mills growing out of any occurrence of the strike.

The company will dismiss the injunction and pay all costs.

Within 60 days after the strikers accept this settlement and call off the strike, the company will employ 25 strikers.

Thereafter, three out of every four hired shall be strikers.

The company shall continue to be governed by section 7 (a) of the NIRA and shall operate under the code of fair competition for the hosiery industry.

Union Session Called.

If the strikers do not accept the terms of the agreement within 30 days, the company is not bound by the clauses requiring it to restore strikers to duty.

Whitson announced last night a meeting of the union will be held Saturday to consider the agreement.

Mayor J. D. d'Armand, of Harriman, declared that "everything is lovely in Harriman again," according to the Associated Press.

"I want to congratulate the Government," he said, "on restoring the emblem to the mill and bringing peace to our city."

In some NRA quarters, Glancy's decision to restore the Blue Eagle occasioned surprise, however. It was pointed out that the terms of the understanding virtually repudiated Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's position in the heretofore bitter controversy.

What attitude the recovery administrator, now in San Francisco, will adopt toward the agreement was considered problematical last night. Glancy had full authority to negotiate and sign the agreement.

Protest Planned.

The full wrath of the American Federation of Labor probably will be aroused by the agreement, it was indicated last night. John W. Edelman, general representative of the American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers, served notice he would protest to Johnson, according to the United Press.

The strikers were not consulted, and neither was Berry, Edelman charged. He said Berry had so informed him by telephone last night.

Whitson and other leaders pointed out that while the agreement stipulated the company "shall continue to be governed by section 7a" the entire controversy in Harriman grew out of the mill's failure to observe this section of the National industrial recovery act, and that the new admonition therefore would be worthless.

The trouble in Harriman had its inception a few months after NRA went into effect last year, when about 200 employes struck, charging violation of the collective bargaining provisions.

After investigation by the labor board, Johnson removed the mills' Blue Eagle in April of this year.

Boycott Charged.

The mills continued to operate with nonunion workers, and Harriman business men, angered by removal of the compliance insignia from the hosiery company took down their own Blue Eagles in protest.

After efforts at conciliation, during which the mills charged "persecution" by NRA, the hosiery company closed down its plant and threw 600 out of work. It claimed it was being boycotted because it lacked the Blue Eagle.

Yesterday's agreement permitted the NRA Government Contracts Section to release to the firm certain contracts which had been held up pending a settlement, in conformity with an Executive order restricting Government business to Blue Eagle firms.

But with dissension, even in NRA ranks, regarding the settlement, none believed the last word had been heard on the Harriman situation.

General Says Remarks Did Not Damage Curtiss-Wright.

Decision on the demurrer seeking to dismiss a $200,000 libel suit against Gen. William Mitchell, former chief of Air Corps, was taken under advisement yesterday by Federal District Judge Luther B. Way, at Alexandria.

The suit was filed by the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, on the basis of remarks made by Gen. Mitchell in an address March 3 before the Foreign Policy Association, New York City.

Judge Way ordered the defendant to file briefs before August 10. If the demurrer is overruled, the case will go to trial in October.

A corps of attorneys for Mitchell, headed by Seth Richardson, former Assistant Attorney General, and Leo P. Harlowe, claimed the language used by their client was not slanderous.

Attorneys for Curtiss-Wright, including Gardner L. Boothe, of Alexandria, claimed such phrases as "aeronautical racketeers" and "air profiteers" were aimed at his client and libeled its good name.

Building Company In Receivership

Vang Firm Agrees Action Will Aid Creditors.

Cumberland, Md., July 20.—Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan yesterday appointed James C. Shriver and Owen E. Hitchins as receivers for the Vang Construction Co., in Maryland. The corporation has principal offices and a large equipment storage yard here.

The receivership cites the Vang Co. has three Federal river improvement contracts near Pittsburgh, Pa., and Huntington, W. Va. One of its creditors has attached its account in a Pittsburgh bank, interfering with control of assets and making it impossible to meet the pay roll. The bill sets out its assets as of May, 1934, were approximately $600,000, and in excess of its liabilities.

On July 11, following a petition signed by R. H. Lee, receivers were named in Federal District Court, Pittsburgh. They join with Lee as plaintiffs in the local suit. Lee says the corporation is indebted to him for services. The defendant agreed to the receivership, saying that forced sale of its property will injure its creditors and interfere with completion of its Government contracts.

Missing Prison Trusty Hunted

Grafton, W. Va., July 20 (Spl.).—Fifty reform school boys today aided State police in a hunt through bottom lands of the Tygarts Valley River for the body of James Powell, 16, trusty at the State reformatory at Pruntytown, believed to have been killed Tuesday by two inmates who were attempting to escape.

Meanwhile, Davis Burner, 18, and Albert Nichols, 16, are held in jail here, pending the filing of formal charges against them.

Since their arrest and alleged confessions, Burner and Nichols have told conflicting stories, thus creating considerable doubt as to whether Powell was slain. There is a growing belief he is alive and has made his escape.

Ickes Orders Power Survey By U. S. Board

Committee to Analyze Federal Control and Middleman Plans.

(Associated Press.)

Before leaving the Capital last night on a vacation, Secretary Ickes pointed the new National power policy committee toward a study of Government ownership of power.

As an alternative to ownership, the committee will consider a program for placing the Government as a middleman between the dynamo and the lightbulb, as purchaser and seller of power.

The final form the plan may take will depend on findings of the committee in its stuudy of the broad power field. Even in advance of committee deliberations, however, power experts said entrance of the Government into the power market, as buyer and seller, would mean Federal control of prices and sources.

"The committee will formulate a National power policy," a high official said last night, "in which will be developed a plan for better cooperation betwen the various Federal agencies daeling with the problem, and for welding together the several afctors having to do with the National power supply, public and private.

"The end sought is that power matters, including legislation and regulation, may be unified and electricity made available more broadly at cheaper rates, not only to domestic, but also to agricultural and industrial cnosumers.

"I am in favor of the widest possible development of natural public resources for the purpose of providing power at low rates in any manner compatible with the National interest."

Dying Gangster Refuses Help

D. C. Gunman, Trapped in New York, Declines Transfusion.

Herbert Myers, 39, widely sought member of the Tristate Gang, dying of a bullet wound in his abdomen in Fordham Hospital, New York City, yesterday refused a blood transfusion necessary to save his life, it was learned from Washington police.

The gangster was shot down by Detective Lieut. Frank O'Neill, of the New York police, when trapped in his New York apartment.

Qestioned on his hospital bed, Myers denied killing Detective James Garvey and constantly repeated a desire to die. Physicians said that Myers could not live without an operation.

Wanted in Washington in connection with two mail robberies and the wounding of a woman during a holdup a year ago, Myers was sought also in Richmond, Philadelphia and New York. Police and postal inspectors in the meantime redoubled their efforts to apprehend Arthur Misanas, reputed master mind of the Tristate Gang and its only member still at large.

House Repair Loans Mostly Not Voluntary

Nearly All Pleas Result From Requirement for Full Financing.

Relaitvely few of the 802 applications at the Washington branch of the Home Owners Loan Corporation for house repair loans are voluntary requests, it was learned yesterday.

Practically all of the loans under consideration are for "esential" repairs which the corporation requires before it will take over the financing of a property.

Fewer than a hundred applications for reconditioning as made possible under the amending of the Home Loan law have been received at the local headquarters.

This explains the fact that approximately $100,000 is the total of loans under consideration. They are for essential repairs and average about $130 per house.

The essential repairs are required by the corporation to secure its investment, which runs for 15 years. They are mainly painting and other outside improvements.

Of the 802 cases pending, inspections of the work to be done has been made in 781 and in 606 specifications have been drawn up and sent to the owner for his approval. Of these jobs, 490 have been sent for bids and of these bids have been received on 419.

For the entire country 288,000 loans involving approximately $55,000,000 are under consideration.

RFC Will Buy City Bonds to Aid WPA Jobs

(Associated Press.)

The RFC plans to purchase sound municipal securities in virtually unlimited amounts and market them for cities to enlarge their borrowing power for public works projects, Chairman Jesse H. Jones said yesterday.

The purchasing will be from the Public Works Administration, he said, which holds millions in securities as collateral for PWA loans. Jones indicated the scope of the plan will be limited only by the soundness of the securities and the RFC's ability to market them.

As a beginning, Jones reached a tentative agreement with Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York to buy about $100,000,000 of the collateral that city offers for the PWA loans. This would serve to bolster the dwindling resources of the PWA and enable it to advance the money for projects totaling $100,000,000, for which New York has been seeking capital.

"There is practically no limit to what we can do in the way of purchasing good city securities with a revolving fund, and offering them wisely, so as not to glut the market," Chairman Jones said.

The New York mayor said he did not intend the city should build "imprudently" but pointed out that construction in New York would "help the whole country, because steel and other supplies are purchased everywhere."

The $100,000,000 in PWA projects still pending is exclusive of the $25,000,000 the Administration has earmarked for New York housing, the $23,000,000 for the completion of the subway system and the $48,000,000 for the Tri-Borough bridge.

Girl Still Is Sought In Spite Kidnaping

Believed to Have Gone Away With Cousin.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 20 (Spl.).—Search for Nannie Helen Johnson, 16, who disappeared from her home at Dunbrooke last night in what is believed to be a "spite kidnaping" by her first cousin, Boyd V. Johnson, 31, was still in progress in Essex County today.

Missing also from her Dunbrooke home is Mrs. Helen Mason, friend of Johnson, who is thought to have accompanied the man and girl in their escape. The alleged kidnaping, county officials believe, arose from disagreements between Boyd Johnson and his uncle, Edward W. Johnson, father of the girl.

Washington and Baltimore authorities were notified.

Income Tax Yield Higher in Virginia

Official Calls It Result of Improved Business.

Richmond, July 20 (Spl.).—Individual income tax reports from two Virginia cities, Norfolk and Fredericksburg, showed today that the assessments will be more than 25 per cent greater in these communities than in 1933.

C. H. Morrissett, the State tax commissioner, said the increases indicate improved business conditions, although some of the gain is due to the income tax increase levied by the 1934 Assembly.

Norfolk people paid $58,780.71 in 1933, and the book shows that they will pay $78,449.83 this year, an increase of $19,669.13, or about 30 per cent. Fredericksburg income-tax payers paid $8,472.45 last year and will pay $10,639.60 this year, an increase of $2,167.15, or about 25 per cent.

"The Three Musketeers" to Be Filmed by Improved Process in Natural Colors

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

With the perfection of Technicolor's three-color process, the production of both short-reel and full-length motion pictures in natural colors is coming back into favor.

A great deal of experimentation was indulged in at great cost by several of the major producers a few years ago, with net results that were not satisfactory, either artistically or financially. The difficulties then encountered are said now to have been largely overcome and the pendulum seems about to swing back in the direction of natural color photography.

I am more or less confirmed in this belief by a bulletin from Bob Sisk, of RKO-Radio, which announces that his company, in association with Pioneer Pictures, will produce "The Three Musketeers" in the new Technicolor process in the fall.

It is this process that has just been so successfully employed in the making of "La Cucaracha" (The Cockroach) by Pioneer. This is a short-reel subject soon to be released and distributed by RKO-Radio. It is described. from preview, as one of the most unusual short subjects ever made. The same process has been made known to the public also through the medium of Walt Disney's Silly Symphonies.

Arrangements Completed.

John Hay Whitney, president of Pioneer Pictures, recently returned East from Hollywood, where he completed arrangements for the production of "The Three Musketeers" with J. C. McDonough and B. B. Kahane, representing RKO-Radio.

Kenneth McGowan, who produced "Le Cucaracha," will serve in the same capacity in the making of the Dumas romance and Robert Edmond Jones, eminent scenic artist who designed the "Cucaracha" settings, will perform the same function for "Musketeers."

Francis Lederer will head the all-star cast which is already being tentatively assembled, although production is not expected to begin until about October 1, with the National release date set for approximately January 1, 1935.

It has already been made known in this space that the Technicolor process has been so improved of late that its utilization in the newsreels is highly probable.

Many confirmed motion picture devotees will recall that it was not so long ago that color photography simply could not be made to "track" satisfactorily and blurred so outrageously that it would pull the eyes right out of your head. All that has now been overcome and there would seem to be no valid reason why the cinema should not reflect all of the soft and gentle tints of nature.

We shall see what we shall see.

It was definitely decided yesterday to continue the run of "Of Human Bondage," starring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, through next Tuesday at RKO-Keith's Theater, thus completing a hot-weather run of two solid weeks. Interest has not abated in this picturization of one of W. Somerset Maugham's best-known stories since the day of its opening, Wednesday, July 11. On next Wednesday, July 25, RKO-Keith's will inaugurate the engagement of "Whom the Gods Destroy," in which Walter Connolly is said to have one of the most fruitful opportunities of his career before the cameras, and in which charming Doris Kenyon also is advantageously cast. So you know.

Concerning Elizabeth Bergner.

With further regard to producing company alliances, considerable importance at the moment is being attached to the presence in London of both Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck, president and vice president, respectively, of Twentieth Century Pictures, releasing through United Artists.

Zanuck, who has been on a big game hunt, has only recently arrived in the British capital and will shortly set sail for the United States. He will remain in New York for a week or two and is expected to arrive in Hollywood about August 10. His presence in London with Schenck lends color to the belief that Elizabeth Bergner will be among those persent in Hollywood this fall.

It was Miss Bergner, one of the most vibrant personalities on either the contemporary stage or screen, who scored so emphatically by the brilliance of her individual performance in the title role of "Catherine, the Great," opposite Douglas Fairbanks, jr.

May Appear on Stage.

According to report, the only circumstance that can interfere with Miss Bergner's acceptance of the Hollywood offer is the little matter of her projected appearance on the New York stage in "Escape Me Never." The play already has been purchased for picturization by British and Dominion films, but it is understood that Schenck and Zanuck are negotiating for the rights with a view to producing the film on this side, in which case it could easily be arranged to set aside the Broadway stage appearance or limit it to a very short season, in the Noel Coward manner.

One reads between the lines, if he is good at that sort of thing, that in addition to Elizabeth Bergner, Twentieth Century has it in mind to sign several English players for appearances in American films.

The Washington Community Players want to borrow a dog. The particular canine sought should be possessed of some slight sense of comedy and be reasonably the comedian in appearance, for he is wanted for an important part in the forthcoming presentation of Will Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in the National Sylvan Theater on July 30 and 31.

The original intention was to get a dog—just a plain dog—from the Pound and, after the production of the play, present him to some member of the cast, but on second thought it was decided to appeal to dog-owning Washingtonians for the loan of pet whose histrionic abilities might be slightly better known.

So it is requested that owners of dogs "audition" their pets before officers of the Washington Community Players—specifically Bess Davis Schreiner—at Central High School tonight between the hours of 8 and 10.

Who knows but out of all this may come another Flush?

Another "Headline" Band.

It will be Ted Black and his nationally known N. B. C. broadcast orchestra at Chevy Chase Lake tonight as the nearby Maryland resort continues its series of "headline" dance band presentations.

This popular orchestra, which features Edith Caldwell and Dick Williams, two talented vocalists, created no less than a sensation when it played at the Lake in August of last year. It is also well remembered by students at the University of Maryland as the band that played for one of their proms earlier this year.

In celebration of his birthday, which occurs today, it is expected that Black will arrange something a little "different" in the way of a program for tonight.

Eddie Carr and Al Stern, managers of Chevy Chase Lake, announce that permission has been secured to continue dancing until 1 a. m. Sunday mornings, thus affording the Saturday night crowds an extra hour of fun.

If Eastern Division Manager Carter Tate Barron, of Loews', Inc., could be relied upon to skip this paragraph, the column might, in a moment of inadvertence, admit that it received a cordial note from his charming wife, "Chic," yesterday, saying many pleasant things and conveying the word that that lusty little "Cracker," Carter Tate, jr., is proving himself a real Georgian by having the time of his life crawling around in the blistering heat wave that has Atlanta in its grip. It wasn't necessary to go to Atlanta to find that heat wave, Chic, we have a fairly representative sample of one right here at home!

Phillips a Fountain Pen.

Yesterday's mails also brought a long letter from Prof. Phil Lampkin, the youthful southpaw baton-swisher over the excellent orchestra at Loew's Fox Theater, now vacationing at his home in Hollywood. A few excerpts from Prof. Lampkin's ebullient observations may prove of interest to his friends and those who know their way around and what time it is, to wit:

"It is a grand feeling to be with my mother, sister and brother after an absence of almost four year . . . Last night was at the El Rey Club, gathering spot late at night for the picture people . . . At our table were W. S. Van Dyke, the director; Hal Rosson and Fuzzy Knight . . . Just back of me was Jack Benny and across the way Joe E. Brown and Frank Orsatti, the director . . . Hal Rosson, a victim of the infantile paralysis epidemic, limps and has to use a cane and is leaving soon for Europe to seek a permanent cure under European specialists . . . Spoke to Ben Lyon on the phone this afternoon . . . It is practically set for Bebe Daniels and him to go into the new Lew Brown musical, but first he is to make an independent picture . . . Also had a nice chat with Una Merkel, who is finishing a picture on our M-G-M lot, and with an old friend, Stuart Erwin, who is just beginning one there . . . Tomorrow night am going out to the Olympic Stadium to see Young Peter Jackson fight Kid Mack from Denver . . . Looks like a sell-out . . . In all probability will see Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller there . . . By the way, that divorce is off and they are together constantly . . . This is about all the news for now . . .I'll be seeing you in a few weeks."

Rebellion Note.

Look out, Hains Point, here I come!

Beauties Now on Warner Screens

Straight From the Studios

Impediments Arise in Casting of "David Copperfield;" Brian Aherne Is to Appear With Helen Hayes; Breezy Items From Celluloid Capital.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, July 19.—Fulfillment of the original intention of having English players exclusively in "David Copperfield" seems to be coming about with marked reservations. The English are fast catching up with the Americans.

EDNA MAY OLIVER.

Yesterday the name of Hugh Williams, of Britain, was added to those of Elizabeth Allan and Jean Cadell. He is to play the very important role of Steerforth. His being chosen for "Copperfield" can be directly attributed to tokens of approval passed upon his performance in "The Green Hat."

On the American side there are now Lionel Barrymore, Edna May Oliver and Lew Stone, in the role of Mr. Wickfield, while one still hears Peter Trent mentioned for Copperfield, Charles Laughton for Micawber, and occasionally Maureen O'Sullivan for the child-wife, Dora.

Regarding Williams and Steerforth, those who know their Dickens, are well aware of Steerforth's part in the plot as the friend of David, responsible for the seduction of Little Em'ly.

Orient Lures Comedian.

Joe E. Brown likes the Orient so well that he will be returning there next spring. And he is probably going alone on that occasion, as Mrs. Brown is much less enthusiastic. Brown wants to adventure far into China on his next trip. Incidentally, Joe E. is sporting a marcel these days, required for his impersonation in "The Six-Day Bike Rider."

Luck for Langdon.

Maybe it's a sign of luck for Langdon. Anyway, he has been nominated to start off the new season of short comedies at the Columbia studio. The comedy is being written by Arthur Ripley, who will direct the picture.

Andy Clyde is to undertake the second comedy, written by Pierre Courdere.

• • • •

Part for Brian Aherne.

Finally settled on as the lead in "What Every Woman Knows" is Brian Aherne, long rumored for the part. For a while it appeared as if a commitment for a Noel Coward play in London would prevent, but Coward's illness is causing the postponement of that production, which was to have opened August 20.

Helen Hayes is, of course, to be starred in the picture. She played in the Barrie piece on the stage. Lois Wilson enacted the role at the time in the silents.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

Rudy Vallee will be coming West to appear in "Sweet Music" for Warners about October 1.

Victoria Vinton, of the Busby Berkeley aggregation, will play a part in "Happiness Ahead."

Maxine Doyle has been assigned to a role in "Six-Day Bike Rider," and has received a five-year contract.

"Young and Beautiful," at Mascot, boasts the following cast: William Haines, John Miljan, Shaw and Lee, Judith Allen, Joseph Cawthorn, Ted Fio-Rito and his orchestra, Vince Barnett, Warren Hymer, Franklin Pangborn, Ed Lester's 30 "Hollywood Singers," Fred Kelsey, James Bush, James Burtis and various others.

• • • •

Casting Uncertain.

It's by no means certain that Jean Muir will appear as the nun in the picturizaton of "The Miracle," which Max Reinhardt may eventually direct, since he is coming here to stage "Midsummer Night's Dream" in September. Miss Muir is a strong candidate, but Josephine Hutchinson, former Washingtonian, is also being spoken of, since she is pleasing in "Happiness Ahead."

Another picture that is now scheduled for Miss Hutchinson is "The White Cockatoo," written by Mignon Everhart. This is a brand-new novel which has to do with a duo of Americans, an engineer and a young woman, who became involved in a robbery and murder mystery in a hotel in southern France.

County Debt Parley Is Set

Wise Has $2,633,737 in Bonds Outstanding, Needing $2 Tax Rate.

Norton, Va., July 19 (AP).—An innovation in county financing in Wise County takes place here tomorrow when Wise County officials and holders of $2,633,737 in county and district bonds sit down in a debt parley and attempt to work out a refinancing program.

The program would be designed to assure safety to the bond holders and at the same time come within the ability of the county to pay.

Briefly the financial status of the county is as follows:

The bonded indebtedness as of January 1, 1934 was $2,633,737, of which $1,771,500 are county and district road bonds, $79,000 county home bonds and $783,237 school bonds and State literary fund loans.

The average annual requirements over the next five years to meet the interest, sinking fund and maturities is $245,595.

Allowing for delinquencies, this would require a tax rate of at least $2. To this would have to be added an 80 cents levy for county operating expenses and $1.95 for schools, county authorities said, making a total of $4.75.

The county authorities say, also, that the county does not want to fall into the defaulting class, but the people can not pay a $4.75 rate.

Pastors Are Told Need for Training

Rural Ministers' School Held at Blacksburg.

Blacksburg, Va., July 20 (Spl.).—Stressing the need for additional training if ministers are to be leaders in their communities, speakers at the ten-day session of the rural ministers' school here this week are arousing interest in the possibilities of planned development in rural communities along social, economic, political and educational lines and the part to be taken in that connection by the rural church.

At last night's session, A. B. Graham, of the United States Department of Agriculture, talked on religion and rural life. During the day the ministers heard Dr. D. W. Charlton, of Altavista; Dr. John Q. Chisley, Dr. W. A. Dawber, of Philadelphia, and Dr. H. W. McLaughlin, of Richmond, Va. Dr. Dawber said the ministers should assume the responsibility of assisting the farmer to aid himself.

Most Virginia farmers have an annual income of only about $600, Dr. William Garnett, rural sociologist of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, told the school. Approximately 75 rural ministers of Virginia and Tennessee are attending.

Richmond, Va., July 20 (AP).—The State milk commission yesterday issued rules for the conduct of the dairy business in the Staunton and Waynesboro district.

The price of high grade milk in quart bottles was fixed at 12 cents retail and 11 cents wholesale. Those prices are fixed for milk of 4.26 to 5.26 per cent butter fat, in which class most of the milk sold in that area falls, the commission said.

Lower grade milk, of 3.25 to 4.25 per cent butter fat, will bring 10 cents wholesale and 11 cents retail. Cream testing 20 per cent will bring 40 cents per quart at retail and 35 wholesale, while higher test cream, of 30 per cent, will be sold at 75 cents per quart retail and 70 cents wholesale.

Contract Near On Jail Costs

Albemarle County Favors Payment Offered by Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., July 20 (Spl.). An agreement between Albemarle County and Charlottesville on the housing and feeding of municipal prisoners in the Albemarle jail appeared near today.

The Albemarle supervisors yesterday approved a proposal of the city commission to pay the actual cost of board for its prisoners, plus 60 per cent. The cost estimate will be based on expenses for food, fuel and salaries of jail attendants.

An ordinance against drunkenness and swearing was adopted by the supervisors to permit the fines assessed for such misdemeanors to be paid into the county treasury instead of the State treasury. The ordinance was drawn by Robert Taylor, assistant commonwealth's attorney, under an act of the 1934 General Assembly permitting cities and counties to adopt ordinances to parallel the State law.

It provides that fines of $1 to $10 may be levied by a court against a person of "age of discretion" who "profanely" curses or gets drunk in a public place. It is effective in Albemarle immediately.

The case came before the court as the result of a petition of citizens to show cause why the license should not be revoked. Testifying for the Commonwealth, several boys, ranging in age from 15 to 17, said they bought beer or ale at the place.

State Pay Assignments To Creditors Forbidden

Richmond, July 20 (Spl.).—The attorney general has ruled that the salaries and wages of State employes are not assignable for the benefit of creditors—that assignments of State pay in advance of the period in which it is earned would be contrary to public policy.

Mosquito Control Director Sees No Harm to Fowl Life

Rehoboth Beach, Del., July 20 (Spl.).—Denial that mosquito control work in Delaware is endangering wild fowl life is contained in a statement by Wilbur S. Corkran, executive officer and engineer of the Delaware mosquito control work, of this place, sent to J. N. Darling, chief of the U. S. Biological Survey at Washington.

Mr. Darling, in an address before the advisory board of the migratory bird treaty act in Washington, recently declared that the mosquito control work is endangering wild ducks by destroying their nesting places. "Millions of acres have been drained where there is no one for mosquitoes to bite," he declared.

Mr. Corkran declares in his statement that no attempt has been made to drain large pools where wild fowl congregate as they contain enough fish to control the mosquito larvae. Besides, he said, these pools are large enough so that the wind creates ripples which discourage mosquito breeding.

Most of the areas drained are barren of vegetation on which fowl feed, because of salt water. By draining them, the vegetation is permitted to grow and provide food for the wild fowl, he said. These areas are alternately flooded and drained by the ditches, flushing larvae into the water for the fish to eat. The normal inch or two of water on these flats would not be of sufficient depth for wild fowl to land, he declared.

Mr. Corkran stated that his foremen report that wild ducks are nesting in the ditched areas as before and have plenty of open water nearby. "Hence," he says, "I am convinced that our mosquito control program does not harm migratory fowl."

The reclamation official declared that the clouds of mosquitoes which have covered these areas have made gunning impossible even in March and December. The reclamation work has demonstrated that mosquitoes can be controlled if large enogh areas are cleared to prevent flight of the pests into unditched areas. "Except for one instance where we have drained an area of perhaps 200 acres which was flooded from storm tides, we really have drained no pools that would furnish resting places for the game, and even this area will be flooded practically the entire fall and winter months when the game is abundant in our territory."

Army Officer Faces Inquiry

Secret Hearing Investigates Charge of Inefficiency of Lieutenant.

Baltimore, July 20 (Spl.).—Charges of "inefficiency, lack of tact, and lack of aggressiveness" against Lieut. Corley B. McDarment, United States Army, are being investigated here today at a secret meeting of high officers of the Third Army Corps Area.

The military board of inquiry hearing the case is presided over by Col. John W. Wright. Sessions are being held behind closed doors in the Postoffice Building here.

Lieut. McDarment is said to have sharply criticized the Army equipment used to fly the air mail last winter. Eight Army officers from Pittsburgh are here as defense witnesses.

'FRISCO FRACAS

By Raymond Clapper

LAST week Democracy underwent one of its severest tests . . . . and apparently came through with flying colors. . .

But will the Pacific's labor riots spread to other cities?

At the very start of the uprising, The Washington Post sent Raymond Clapper, head of its National News Bureau, to the West Coast metropolis. He is still there.

Every day, from the fighting front of the biggest, most violent labor rising since 1919, Mr. Clapper has kept Post readers informed on what actually was happening. He gave both sides of the story . . . . that of the embittered workers as well as that of their resentful and equally embittered employers.

In tomorrow's Special Articles Section, Raymond Clapper presents a graphic analysis of the San Francisco general strike . . . . . and what its defeat may mean in coming conflicts between labor and capital.

10,000 Persons Join in Religious Festival at Virginia Retreat.

By C. B. Carr.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 20.—Recalling folk song fests and sacred ensemble chants of other centuries, when men and women gathered in natural theaters to sing their songs of praise, hope and remorse, more than 2,000 persons, composing a giant choir, today participated in the fourth annual sacred music festival at Massanetta Springs, religious retreat near here.

Eight thousand people from almost every State on the Atlantic seaboard listened attentively from the verdant slopes overlooking Massanetta Springs as the choir, gleaned from the churches of Maryland and Virginia and directed by Dr. John Finley Williamson, director of the Westminster choir school, of Princeton, N. J., poured forth hymns of praise which have won preeminence through the ages.

As the shadows fell across the countryside, the festival choir marched in solemn procession to the hillside where floodlights illuminated the natural amphitheater, preceded by leading ministers of the Shenandoah Valley. The choristers sang "Onward, Christian Soldiers," as they marched.

Music of Masters.

As the setting sun faded, Dr. Williamson and his choir chanted "The Day Is Dying in the West," supported by the congregation.

Dr. Williamson divided the evening program into four parts, each containing the works of such masters as Bach, Prokoff, Arensky and Tschaikowsky.

For nearly two hours the choir held their audience spellbound, ending with a chant of Brahm's "How Lovely is Thy Dwelling."

The choir was composed of leading members of church groups from Hagerstown and Frederick, Md., Staunton, Harrisonburg, Winchester, Front Royal, Woodstock, Strasburg, Newport News, Richmond, Lynchburg, Waynesboro, Roanoke, Lexington, Clifton Forge, Covington, Norfolk and Danville, Va.

Closes Music Week.

Today's program climaxed sacred music week at Massanetta Springs. Speaking on "Church Music," Dr. Williamson called upon the churches of America to adopt art, music, sculpture and other forms of culture as part of their teachings, in order to offer greater attraction for the classically minded people of the Nation.

During the forenoon there was a Virginia musicians' program, in which solos and ensembles were featured. Artists heard on the program included Robert Schane, soloist in the Episcopal Church, Harrisonburg; Miss Frances Houck, soloist in the Methodist Church, Harrisonburg; Mrs. Susan Reid Williams, Norfolk; the Glee Club of Harrisonburg State Teachers College; the Capella Choir of the Church of the Brethren, Hagerstown, Md., and the vocal art ensemble of the Scherzo Club, Norfolk.

Pen Mar Park Host to Church

Waynesboro, Pa., July 20 (Spl.). One of the largest gatherings of members of the Lutheran denomination in the Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and District of Columbia division assembled yesterday at Pen Mar Park, near here.

The reunion is an annual event, arranged by a committee selected at the annual meeting of the Maryland Synod of the Lutheran Church.

The Rev. Rees Edgar Tulloss, Ph. D., D. D. LL. D., president of Wittenberg College, Springfield, Ohio, one of the largest Lutheran colleges in the country, was the principal speaker. He discussed the question, "Is Religion Worth While?"

A large chorus from Lutheran churches of Chambersburg, Pa., under the direction of Mrs. John W. Hoke, formerly a member of the Wilson College faculty there, furnished the special music and led the audience in the singing of hymns. The Pen Mar Park Orchestra, under the direction of Zullinger Smith, Waynesboro, gave a half-hour concert.

The Rev. Dr. John W. Ott, of Hagerstown, Md., president of the Maryland Synod, presided and was assisted by the Rev. Seibert Leo Hench, of Dallastown, Pa., president of the West Pennsylvania Synod. Assisting with the program details were the Rev. Dr. Amos John Travers, Frederick, Md.; Dr. A. R. Steck, Carlisle, Pa., and Dr. J. Luther Hoffman, Baltimore.

The Rev. B. Clinton Ritz, pastor of the Waynesboro Evangelical Lutheran Church, was chairman of the committee arranging for the reunion this year. The secretary of the reunion committee was the Rev. H. B. Burkholder, pastor of the Lutheran Church at Greencastle, Pa.

U. S., State Law Delay Division Of Road Funds

Virginia Allocation Not to Be Announced Till Next Week.

Richmond, July 20 (Spl.).—Work of figuring out allocation of the $3,765,000 Federal road money appropriated to Virginia for construction this fiscal year was complicated by Federal regulations and State law, Henry G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, stated today.

In the first place, the Federal regulations required that the fund be divided so that 50 per cent go to the Federal-aid system, 25 per cent to city and town streets which are a part of through routes, and 25 per cent to county roads of the feeder class.

These factors were sufficient to puzzle the members of the highway commission at its meeting in Richmond yesterday, but there was another Federal regulation which made their study even more difficult. That was the requirement that some of the money be expended in at least 50 of the State's 100 counties.

Then the commission had to grapple with the State law requirement that the money be divided among the eight construction districts into which the highway department is divided. Then there had to be met the situation created by the rule that such division must be made on the basis of the population, area and proportion of primary mileage in the districts.

Mr. Shirley said today that he felt sure that he would not be able to announce the allocation of the Federal fund until next week.

Toot! Toot! Toot! Bridge Is Raised, But Where Is Boat?

Salisbury, Md., July 20 (Spl.). The three sharp blasts of a tugboat whistle early yesterday, warned the bridge tender at the Main Street draw of the approach of a vessel seeking entrance to the north harbor.

Up climbed the tender to his little tower and the siren stopping traffic across the bridge sounded. Up came two sections of the bridge, but nothing happened. The tender closed the draw and went out to investigate. No vessel was in sight in either direction.

Again came the warning blast of the tugboat whistle and again the bridge tender rushed to his tower, but this time he waited for another signal. None came.

Inquiry developed the fact that a local manufacturing concern had installed a new whistle of the tugboat type. And now Harbor Master Charles E. Harper is wondering what to do about it.

Mortar, Pestle, 200 Years Old, Will Come Here

Berlin, Md., July 20 (Spl.).—Moulded from bell-metal in Germany around 200 years ago, a copper-colored mortar and pestle, well known trade-mark of the druggist trade, was presented yesterday to William C. Powell, Snow Hill pharmacist and a member of the Maryland State Board of Pharmacy.

Powell plans to present the ancient mortar and pestle to the National Institute of Pharmacy in Washington, where it will repose in the institute's new building.

The late Dr. G. M. Vandegrift, Worcester County physician, of Atkinson's district, whose great-great-grandfather brought the mortar and pestle to this country from Germany prior to the American Revolution, promised during his life to bequeath the ancient drug tool to Powell in appreciation of a professional friendship of long standing. Yesterday the bequest was delivered.

Cleaners Plan Test of NRA Price Ruling

Richmond Group Attacks Constitutionality of All Provisions.

Richmond, July 20 (AP).—The Richmond Cleaners and Dyers Board of Trade announced today that it will ask the Supreme Court of the United States for a ruling on the authority of NRA to suspend certain parts of a trade code while attempting to enforce other sections.

R. W. Billingsley, manager, said the board's attorney, C. W. Werne, is preparing to ask the court to exercise original jurisdiction in the case.

The board plans an attack on the constitutionality of all provisions of the National recovery act.

The board's counsel is prepared to argue the trade was urged to assent to code regulations with the inducement it would be given protection against unfair competitive practices.

The board contends NRA recognized price minimums necessary to eliminate unfair practices and incorporated them in the original code. Later, however, the price provisions were canceled, but the industry was told it must still abide by the labor and wage regulations.

"NRA authorities have been juggling in the affairs of private citizens to suit the whims of a few individuals who are apparently imbued with a complex of authority," Billingsley said.

He indicated that if the court ruling upholds the contention of the Cleaners and Dyers Board, firms which have been cutting prices may face prosecution.

Fleet at Roads In September

Two Weeks' War Game Is Believed Scheduled Off Coast.

Norfolk, Va., July 20 (Spl.).—Hampton Roads will be alive with warships in September when the entire United States Fleet visits this port.

The coming of the fleet was announced today at the Norfolk naval operating base. It was stated that the fleet will engage in maneuvers on the Southern Drill Grounds, about 40 miles south of Cape Henry, early in September and will base on Hampton Roads.

The battle force now engaged in maneuvers at Newport, R. I., will arrive here about August 8, one week ahead of the previously announced schedule.

While official confirmation is lacking, it is understood that the fleet concentration here has been ordered to conduct a two-week war game in which an "enemy" fleet, attempting to force its way through the Virginia Capes to destroy the naval base, is to be engaged.

It is regarded as possible that the scope of maneuvers may be enlarged to include participation by Army fliers at Langley Field.

Under the previously announced schedule, the battle force was to have spent a month in Hampton Roads, operating here from August 16 to September 16, when the fleet is scheduled to get under way for the West Coast.

Hagerstown C. of C. to Probe State Traffic Fine Situation

Fears Tourists May Avoid Maryland If Practice Continues.

Hagerstown, Md., July 20 (Spl.). Urging that Maryland bring its fines for traffic violations into line with those imposed elsewhere, motor clubs have asked the Hagerstown Chamber of Commerce to investigate certain cases which, it is felt, may cause tourists to avoid Maryland.

Directors of the chamber on Monday will consider a report from the McKean County Motor Club, of Pennsylvania, which states that numerous complaints have been received from motorists of excessive fines collected from visiting motorists in Maryland.

The case of Dale Dorn, of Bradford, Pa., arrested for speeding here, was cited by the motor club, in which Dorn forfeited bond of $101.25 after he had been held in jail.

Faced Big Fine.

The complaint states that Dorn informed the motor club that he had been advised that the best thing he could do was to fail to return for a hearing, because if he demanded trial his fine would be at least $100 and up to $1,000, with a possible jail sentence up to three months. The protest did not defend Dorn for speeding, but stated that it felt that $100 fines were excessive, citing those of Pennsylvania, which are from $10 to $25. Fines of $100 are collected in Pennsylvania only where the motorist is intoxicated.

Dorn was returning home from Washington when he was picked up by a State policeman and charged with speeding, but not with reckless driving, states the protest.

"Our clubs have become out of patience with the Maryland process of correcting speed, and the many complaints have been widely discussed," the protest states. "We call your attention to an outstanding case that is receiving much attention at the present time, involving a member of the Reading, Pa., club, who was fined after his car was damaged and after the party causing the damage had pleaded guilty and was freed.

Few Not Guilty.

"Without defending reckless drivers or even those who exceed posted speed limits, we are all reminded that few motorists who use the road are not guilty to some extent of speeding," the protest concludes.

The chamber has found that the records of the case referred to in the letter show that the motorist was exceeding 60 miles an hour and, if found guilty, is subject to a fine of from $100 to $1,000 or prison term.

The chamber also has been informed that Maryland motorists, particularly truck operators, have recently protested excessive fines imposed in Pennsylvania for overloading. Whereas the fine in Pennsylvania is $52.50 on conviction of overloading a truck, the fine imposed in Maryland is $5.75 with no distinction made for out-of-State truckers.

Hollar's Fate In Saum Death Is Up to Jurors

Hagerstown Father Says He Doesn't Recall Firing Shot.

Hagerstown, Md., July 20 (Spl.). The case of Allen Hollar, 45, charged with the murder of George A. Saum, 22, was given to the jury today at 3 p. m. Hollar is charged with killing Saum after the latter had taken Hollar's daughter, Jane, 16, on a week-end trip to Washington.

Saum was shot fatally while putting his car away after he was released from jail. Police testified that no charges were preferred against Saum at the request of Hollar, who told them he was satisfied with the girl's story that she had asked the young married man to take her to Washington to visit some cousins, had returned with him and then went back to Washington.

Hollar today testified that he did not remember the shooting or being questioned by authorities.

He testified he could not recall having told officers, as testified by Capt. of Police Clarence Emmert, that "I feel no regret. If I didn't do a good job of it, I'm sorry, and I am glad I can take the rap for this little girl, even if it's the extreme, for I'm guilty and I expect no mercy."

Hollar said he recalls hearing a shot, but did not recall taking a revolver from his pocket.

In explaining possession of the revolver, which the prosecution contends was the weapon used to kill Saum, Hollar testified that he borrowed the revolver from a neighbor two days after his daughter disappeared and that he wanted it to protect his daughter in the event he found her in the hands of white slavers or kidnapers.

Hollar said he walked to the vicinity of Saum's home after seeing Saum drive by. He recalled stepping up to Saum and Carl Smith at Saum's garage.

"A terrible rush of emotion started up in me," Hollar started to testify. The prosecutor objected and the court upheld it.

Efforts to get into testimony reference of the week-end trip, which it was contended led up to the shooting, have been balked.

Broening May Indorse Nice For Governor

Former Baltimore Mayor Expected to Reply to Dr. France.

Baltimore, July 20 (Spl.).—Former Mayor William F. Broening, Republican executive of Baltimore for two terms and a power in G. O. P. affairs, was reported today to be preparing a statement indorsing Harry W. Nice for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

The statement is expected within two or three days, and has been precipitated, it is believed, by a query by former Senator Joseph I. France, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States Senator on the H. Webster Smith ticket.

Speaking several days ago at Annapolis, Dr. France inquired pointedly as to Mr. Nice's political activities since 1919, when Mr. Nice was defeated for Governor by Albert C. Ritchie.

Charges Inactivity.

It was Dr. France's claim that Nice had been inactive during the past 15 years in behalf of the Republican party, and so is not entitled to the party's nomination for Governor this year.

He also asked who Nice had supported for Governor four years ago, when Broening was the Republican nominee for Annapolis.

Nice's reply came today in a statement saying he had favored Broening for Governor, and had worked for him in 1930. "Ask Mr. Broening, he knows," invited Mr. Nice.

Replying to the query as to what he had done for the Republican party in the last 15 years, Nice said he had acted as a "political carpenter, doing minor political chores and odd jobs."

Tells of His Efforts.

He said he had made campaign contributions, written political pamphlets and ads and had aided in preparing speeches for other candidates to make.

Things are quiet along the Democratic sector in State politics. Gov. Ritchie's absence on a trip to Europe has slowed down the work on his behalf for a fifth term, and Mayor Jackson, the Governor's principal rival for the nomination, has done nothing of primary interest.

League to Inspect Municipal Plant

Cumberland Group Plans Visit to Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., July 20 (Spl.). Officials of the Public Ownership League of Cumberland, which has been studying the possibility of a municipal electric light plant there, will be the guests of local city officials Sunday to inspect the local municipal light plant and distribution system and to study rates and other data, the information to be used at a conference with the Potomac Edison Co. soon.

The Ownership League will seek to have the Potomac Edison Co. reduce light and power rates in Cumberland before proceeding with plans for a municipal light plant. Consulting engineers, engaged some months ago, reported costs and estimated profits of a municipal light plant for Cumberland.

Hagerstown has operated its municipal light plant for some years and during the last five years has obtained net annual profits of $130,000.

Constable Refuses to Submit To Arrest for Court Contempt

Danville, Va., July 20 (Spl.).—Danville was wondering today what will happen next week to the Pittsylvania County constable who refused to be arrested for contempt of court and who has blocked the law successfully so far.

Constable W. A. Brown engaged in words with Trial Magistrate Charles R. Warren, of Chatham, near here, before the latter opened his regular court session in a small office in North Danville, just within the city limits. Witnesses said that the exchange was on the subject of fees which Brown claimed are accruing to him in a garnishment proceeding. Irked at him, Warren turned to Magistrate George Evans, of Danville, and asked him to fill out a warrant against Brown for contempt.

Evans replied, "You have the blanks there, fill it out yourself."

Warren wrote out the warrant and gave it to one of several county officers present to serve on Brown, but the latter stood his ground and pointed out that he was in the City of Danville and that none of the county officers had the right to serve a warrant out of the county. The county officers conferred and, recognizing the premises, made no attempt to arrest Brown. Whether city officers will be called to serve it next week was a matter of speculation this evening.

Protestants, Jews and members of other religious bodies will join with Catholics in paying tribute to the memory of the man who was honored by Presidents and who was the friend of rich and poor alike.

Mass to Open Rites.

On Monday, upon orders of Mayor Howard W. Jackson, the City Hall bell will be tolled 100 times, beginning at 10 a. m., as the tribute of the municipality.

Cardinal Gibbons was born in Baltimore in a tiny house which was torn down many years ago. Its site is now in the downtown business section. He was ordained at the cathedral here June 30, 1861, and in later years received successive elevations, becoming vicar apostolic of North Carolina, Bishop of Richmond, and Archbishop of Baltimore.

He was elevated to the cardinalate in 1886, and on the twenty-fifth anniversary of that event, in June, 1911, President Taft came to Baltimore at the head of a group of notable National figures to pay tribute to him. Cardinal Gibbons died March 24, 1921.

Country Papers Facing Crisis, Va. Press Hears

Association Opens Drive to Increase Its Membership.

Charlottesville, Va., July 20 (AP). Members of the Virginia Press Association, meeting here today, adopted amendments designed to strengthen the organization financially and to broaden its membership.

Three main changes were voted by delegates at the forty-sixth annual convention. The new amendments called for:

Provision for two executive vice presidents.

An increase in membership fees.

The association saw a dark picture for future of the country press drawn by H. L. Snyder, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., a publisher of "home town" weeklies for 50 years. Snyder told the convention that the heavy mortality among small weeklies proves that "country journalism must give way to commercialism."

"It can not exist," he said, "except as a luxury, and country journalists must turn more to the printing end of their business."

Small town papers, he continued, have great value in molding public opinion, but they are being crushed by competition from the dailies and the increasing cost of materials.

"It is not so much a question of a free press as a question of making a decent living for our workers and ourselves," he said. "Something must be done to keep the small papers going."

John E. Roberts, of Baltimore, and B. A. Lowrance, of Charlotte, N. C., told of their experiences in operating under recovery codes in the graphic arts and newspaper fields.

The 100 newspapermen at the conclave took a sightseeing tour this afternoon. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Johns before returning to Charlottesville tonight for their annual ball.

(I Corinthians xv:50.) Radio Waves and Ripples

"BECAUSE I know you are so fair and square and candid," writes a listener from a North Carolina orphange to Arch MacDonald, WJSV sports announcer, "I want to ask a favor."

The favor thus requested was two tickets to see the Washington Senators play ball on August 9 and 10.

Explaining that she was cottage mother for 28 young boys—11 to 13 years old—the listener said:

"Some of my boys are in the pool when you come on the air at 6:15 but they beg for the scores just as soon as they get to the cottage . . . We have certainly enjoyed your broadcast and we think of you as one who is fair and square enough to hand a bouquet to the fellow who deserves it regardless of the team for which he plays."

The good matron is coming to Washington and Arch is getting the tickets for her. Two lads from the orphanage will come too. "One is considered about the ugliest boy in our group and the other about the meanest," she advises.

"I believe in the wholesome effect that sports and clean play have on child life. Some of these lives are too serious and a big league ball game would be a thrill," she adds.

You'd get a thrill, too, by dropping into WJSV's studios any afternoon during ball games. You'd see about 40 small boys so closely cluttered about Arch at the mike that he had difficulty in putting his program on the air.

* * * *

TWENTY-SEVEN years ago a most unpromising-looking and very ordinary squawling infant jibbered and squirmed in his crib. Gazing down at the "brat" and shaking his head with disapproving candor was a genial, paunchy newspaper editor.

Mopping his perspiring bald brow, the editor turned to the proud father nearby and remarked dubiously:

"Well, George, he's yours. I suppose you'll have to make the best of it."

An author as well as an editor, the paunchy gentleman offered to inscribe one of his books to the infant. So in the book he wrote:

"My dear boy: When you read this your daddy and I will be old and gray-haired. With love and the wishes of the author. . . ."

Maybe you've read this book. It's called "The Court of Boyville." And the fat editor who signed it to your radio scribe was William Allen White, internationally known editor of the Emporia (Kans.) Gazette. Many's the tale we've heard of William Allen White . . . the Nation reads his pungent, spicy editorials . . . the Republican party looks to him when in doubt . . . reporters feel honored to converse with him. We waited 27 years before we met White. . . . last month at the Press Club during the Newspaper Editors Society conclave.

White will address Columbia networks next Friday, July 27, at 9:45 p. m. on "The American Youth and the American Spirit."

Your Announcer Is . . .

DON DOUGLAS: Leads local field of toreadors. . . . does this hulking, lusty-gusty heman from the steepes of Washington State. Born in Bellingham, Wash., in 1903, he rousted about punching cows in Montana and Canada, enlisting in the Army at the age of 14 when war broke out. Entered the show biz playing straight man for $10 a week in Seattle, where bold dramas were acted above the old "Our House" saloon. Between engagements excavated roads, swabbed decks on coast steamers until he won the part of Sergt. O'Hara in W. Somerset Maugham's "Rain." Turned next to film bits and played stock, finally landing on Broadway for leads in four productions. Broke into radio after the crash with WXYZ at Detroit as an announcer. Kept it up until N. B. C. called him to Washington on January 1, 1934, to handle its Breakfast Club. Don also does character stuff on the Midday Merry-Go-Round, drives his rusty but proud flivver down Fourteenth street at a racing clip. Weighs 180, is 5 feet 10¾ in height. Has brown hair and green eyes. Dislikes affectation in any one. Ambition: "It's too great to even talk about," says Don.

PAUL O'BRIEN, leader of McWilliam's Glen Echo orchestra heard Mondays at 10 p. m. from WRC, promises a further build-up for N. B. C.'s Saturday night "Airbreaks" spot.

Tonight at 10 p. m. when local lads and lassies gather at WRC to offer their talent to the air, compositions written by Washtonians will be featured. You will hear "You Do," a fox trot written by N. B. C.'s Jim McGrath.

But Paul, incidentally, will also play McGrath's number Monday night during his program from Glen Echo. The best locally written piece will be similarly starred by the Glen Echo orchestra each week. N. B. C. cautions us that local composers must come to the studios prepared to play or sing their numbers . . . and that music must be written with full harmony and not with single notes, as have several of the compositions submitted to date.

"SINKUS" IS THE POPULAR TITLE FOR THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE U.S. FLEET...
THE BLACK HOLE OF CALCUTTA - AT THIS SPOT 146 MEN WERE CROWDED INTO A DUNGEON 14 X 18 FEET...
NEXT MORNING ONLY 23 WERE ALIVE!
PEACOCKS NEVER LAY EGGS!
SHAKESPEARE NEVER SAW AN ACTRESS!
7-21-34

The first authenticated record of the appearance of an actress on the stage in England was in 1660 when a lady played the role of Desdemona. This was nearly half a century after the greatest of all English dramatists, Shakespeare, was dead.

Prior to 1660 it was the practice in all dramatic presentations to have female roles taken by beardless young men with soprano voices. It was contrary to the moral code of the early seventeenth century to have a woman appear on the stage. Strange as it seems, Shakespeare never saw an actress play the part of Juliet, the Merry Wives of Windsor were all men, and likewise the bride in the Taming of the Shrew was male—in Shakespeare's time.

"Sinkus" is a varied form of the abbreviation of the fleet commander's official title—Commander-in-Chief of the United States fleet. In dispatches this title is shortened to C-in-C US. and the Navy calls it "Sinkus." The new commander of the fleet is Admiral Joseph M. Reeves.

In 1756, when Calcutta was captured from the English by Surajud-Dowlah, 146 Englishmen from the garrison were crowded into a room only 14 by 18 feet, and with only two small windows. They were kept there overnight, and in the morning only 23 were alive. The terrible incident gained the name of "The Black Hole of Calcutta" for the prison room.

While Under The Influence.

A sharp increase in automobile accidents in Washington during recent months gives special significance to Corporation Counsel Prettyman's campaign against driving while under the influence of liquor. Mr. Prettyman and his staff share with the police a heavy responsibility for protection of the public against this unnecessary menace. The Corporation Counsel is to be congratulated on refusing to countenance what would have been an easy evasion of his duty.

Driving while drunk is not the only offense at which this campaign is aimed. Experts have found that accidents frequently occur when drivers have imbibed just enough alcohol to impair their judgment of distance and speed. Of such driving there is far too much, by people who would doubtless resent police intervention. Mr. Prettyman recognizes that he is entering a difficult border-line territory. But he is perfectly right in saying that neither influence nor power must count, since "the offense is the same, the danger is the same and our duty is the same."

It does not appear that any change in the present law will be necessary in making this campaign effective. Drunken drivers may be fined up to $500 or imprisoned for six months, or both, for their first offense. The real problem is rigid enforcement of the law. For reckless driving under the influence of liquor stiff jail sentences would be salutary. A few sentences of this kind, imposed without favor, would give timely emphasis to Mr. Prettyman's warning.

Man Against Mountain.

Accounts of the latest assault upon Mount Everest arouse a tingle of pride in human fortitude. The world's highest mountain has become a symbol of the unattainable. No man has ever set foot upon its apex, and only once has a daring aviator flown over it. But the race breeds those who never recognize defeat. With determination which often seems to be more than human, they beat against the impregnable fortresses of Nature, both literally and figuratively, until they can beat no more.

Many lives have been lost since 1922 in well-organized attempts to conquer Mount Everest. Seven men were swept over an ice cliff by an avalanche. In 1924 Mallory and Irvine were left to an unknown fate in the icy wastes and subzero weather of this mountain's stratosphere. Others have died of exposure and overexertion in the thin atmosphere 27,000 feet above the sea. Somervell and Norton attained a height of 28,200 feet (the peak is calculated to be 29,140 feet high) after the most elaborate preparations, only to be driven back by intense cold and impossible climbing conditions.

All the preceding failures and tragedies were known to Maurice Wilson, former captain in the British Army. Yet he was lured by an inexplicable urge to conquer the unconquerable. Forbidden by the authorities to attempt such a dangerous venture alone, he left Darjeeling in disguise. With only three porters and a single pack pony, he overcame the initial slopes and then established a camp at an altitude of 21,000 feet.

From this point Wilson set out alone, with 8,200 feet of treacherous glacier to climb, taking only three loaves of bread, two tins of porridge and a camera. The porters watched him climb 2,000 feet and then disappear into the fastness of glacial crags from which he will never return. After waiting a month they returned to Darjeeling to tell their story.

Of course, it may be said that Wilson needlessly sacrificed his life to the ferocity of Nature. But there is something more than that in his feat. The drama of the tiny individual struggling single-handed against the stupendous mountain comes to us like a Homeric epic. No fear of death can halt the inexorable human struggle toward the heights, even though they may be unattainable. And if man loses the courage and the mysterious affinity with the unknown which goaded Wilson on, his pauperized life will scarcely be worth preserving.

German Morale Today.

Rumors that a Nazi court-martial is trying 2,000 prisoners for revolt, and tales of wholesale murder and imprisonment, are being whispered about Germany. They are very likely false, or at least exaggerated. But the point is that official denials, accompanied by denunciations of scandal-mongering will not satisfy a people who have seen ample confirmation of terrorism under the Hitler regime. Whether true or false, the present flood of rumors is an important clew to the state of the German mind. It shows that fear and distrust have taken the place of the esteem and confidence which millions of Germans formerly professed for the Nazi leader.

When normal channels of communication are closed and free speech and free press non-existent, the tale bearer is the only source of real information. Facts are inevitably distorted, and lies gain currency under such conditions. But the stories, however exaggerated, betray the inmost convictions and anxieties of the average citizen. Imprisonment of the tale bearers will not restore the morale of a nation which has been driven back to the psychology of the dark ages by its present leadership.

New Subsidy Policy.

President Roosevelt's recent Executive order, calling for a broad investigation of ocean and foreign air-mail contracts, is an important step toward the promised revision of the Federal subsidy system. Contracts for transportation of mail have been under scrutiny for months. Extensive waste, to put it mildly, has been discovered. The need for modification of the subsidy plan inaugurated in the heyday of prosperity is generally conceded.

The basic problem is, of course, the enactment of new legislation that will permit outright subsidies, where they are necessary to maintenance of an adequate merchant marine and reasonable air transport service. Secretary Roper has indicated that a new study will be made to determine what trade routes are essential, and what subsidies are necessary to enable American lines to meet the competition of foreign interests in ship building and operation. Presumably when this information is available Congress will be asked to grant outright subsidies to essential shipping lines, under strict governmental supervision, instead of maintaining the merchant marine through excessive payments for transportation of mail.

In the meantime it appears desirable to study the existing contracts with the view of equitable revision. If these ten-year agreements were permitted to run their normal course, reform in this field would be unduly postponed. Failure of some companies to fulfill the terms of their contracts, as well as the drastic changes that have come about in our international commerce since the merchant marine act was passed in 1928, seems fully to justify the negotiation of new terms.

Moreover, ample provision has apparently been made to protect the rights of the carriers. The law under which the President acted instructs him to allow "just compensation" to shipping and air-mail companies for any damages resulting from cancellation of their contracts. If the carriers are not satisfied with such a settlement, they may sue the Government. This procedure stands out in emphatic contrast to the policy adopted in dealing with air-mail contractors.

It is intimated that Postmaster General Farley, now in San Francisco, will hint rather broadly to shipping interests there that acceptance of Government largesse in the form of subsidies might well be balanced by a labor policy more in accord with Section 7-A of the recovery act. It would be highly unfortunate if the Administration should confuse the very distinct issues of subsidy and labor policy. But it would be even more unfortunate if certain hard-boiled ship owners should retain the impression that they are entitled to take what they want from the Treasury, but have no social obligations whatsoever in return.

Australia Vs. U. S. A.

With the opening of the Davis Cup interzone finals at Wimbledon today, Australia for the first time in a decade reappears as a serious contender for the most famous of all international athletic trophies. Largely due to the presence of Jack Crawford, deemed at the moment the world's greatest tennis player, the Australians are given a slight betting edge over the American team. But, whoever the winners, a big hurdle will remain ahead in the elimination race for the cup. The British team, as champion last year, has still to be played in the challenge round.

This is the twenty-ninth year of contest for the Davis Cup and while nearly two-score nations now compete annually, four countries have divided the championship throughout. The United States has won ten times; France, Australia and Great Britain six times each. The tendency for tennis supremacy to concentrate is further shown by the fact that the losers in the challenge round have also been divided between these same four countries, except in 1904, when Belgium lost to Great Britain, and in 1921, when Japan lost to the United States.

The last time Australia appeared as challenger was in 1924, when the antipodeans were defeated by our team, five matches to none. For that reason the men from down-under will be the more anxious to even old scores this week. The United States, which last won the cup in 1926, is equally anxious to stage a come-back. So whichever wins it will be a heroic contest, with a complete assurance of clean sportsmanship on both sides.

That attribute has always characterized the contests which owe their fame to Dwight F. Davis, who has the satisfaction of knowing that he has done more than any other man to forward international good feeling through the medium of the most beautiful as well as the most cosmopolitan of games.

Linking The Parks.

Completion of the link between Rock Creek and Potomac Parks has long been one of the fondest dreams of the planners of Washington. For many years the work of joining these two famous parks has been under way. But lack of funds has maintained a barrier between them. The current allocation of $165,000 to complete a section of parkway between the M and P street bridges will remove this obstacle and give Washington one of the most unique public pleasure grounds in the world.

With this link completed, it will be possible to travel from Hains Point to beyond the Maryland line without crossing a street. Residents in all sections of the city will be within relatively close range of this great natural garden. In addition to the normal scattered retreats from the heat, noise and commercial atmosphere, Washington will have a majestic continuous sweep of parkland bisecting the entire city.

Rock Creek and Potomac Parks are of very different character, which makes their connection the more attractive. The former is a natural canyon, wild and rugged in places. Conversely, Potomac Park is largely the handiwork of man. The motorist, horseback rider or hiker who journeys from one to the other will pass from cool ravines and almost primitive wilderness to a landscaped vista of unusual dignity and beauty beside the placid Potomac.

And many of those who relax in the varied environment thus made freely available will spare a thought of gratitude to that which has made it possible—the patience, the skill and the foresight of our city planners.

The Realistic Approach.

The Economic Committee of the League of Nations has just adjourned one of its regular quarterly meetings in Geneva, without attempting to approve any general program designed to cure the economic ills of the world. The experts present admitted that no substantial progress has been made during the past year toward reconciliation of the divergent views on commercial, monetary and related problems which were expressed at the time of the London Conference. Consequently, they have limited their recommendations to a few specific proposals on such subjects as the tourist traffic and technological unemployment.

This restraint is an encouraging indication that a solution of the international problems which have engaged the attention of innumerable committees is being approached in realistic fashion. For a time world conferences and special committees were constantly being summoned to draft working plans for saving civilization from its follies. Some of them did excellent work by creating a better understanding of the causes of economic dislocation and the character of the remedies required. These educative and informative gatherings, however, have served their purpose and a new technique is required in order to develop plans for international cooperation that are politically feasible as well as economically advantageous.

The Economic Committee of the League, for instance, is a continuous body, the members of which hold office for three years and meet at regular intervals. They are under no compulsion to outline a definite program of action to be read to a waiting world, unless there appears to be a reasonable chance for securing effective governmental support for their recommendations.

The usefulness of a conference of this sort is not revealed by official reports and resolutions. It comes from an interchange of views by men who are spokesmen and interpreters for their several countries. In the long run, such an organization is a more effective agency for removing obstructions to commercial and financial intercourse between nations than those overadvertised gatherings which meet in a glare of publicity to outline comprehensive panaceas for immediate execution.

A Lesson From Montana.

Senator John E. Erickson's defeat in the Montana primaries for the Democratic Senatorial nomination recalls the circumstances of his appointment to the Senate. On the death of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Mr. Erickson was serving his third term as Governor of Montana. He resigned from that position and the lieutenant governor who succeeded him immediately appointed Mr. Erickson as Senator Walsh's successor. Accusations of conspiracy to trade these high offices were promptly made.

It would be difficult to determine what part the circumstances surrounding his appointment played in Senator Erickson's defeat. Yet it is notable that his three Democratic colleagues were renominated, while he trailed behind two other candidates for his position. The popularity which carried him to the Governor's chair in 1924, 1928 and 1932 has suddenly collapsed.

The American people have a profound distaste for job trading or any other practice which tends to place the interests of the individual above that of the public. If Senator Erickson owes his defeat to the shifts which brought him to Washington, it may serve as a salutary warning against such practices.

Military Suggestion.

During the war many of us were slightly skeptical about those heroic figures who used to round up and capture whole companies of Germans single-handed. For one thing there always seemed to be so many German soldiers left who hadn't been rounded up; and for another those whom we personally encountered were usually singularly unreceptive to the idea of surrender.

But we are skeptical no longer. When one gunman can descend by rowboat on Governors Island and release a military prisoner from the middle of the Sixteenth United States Infantry, as now reported, nothing in the line of military exploits will henceforth seem incredible.

Nevertheless the incident has disturbing implications from the viewpoint of preparedness. It seems to indicate that more economical ways to achieve that end exist. For instance, if the War Department could persuade Dillinger to patrol Governors Island, both New York and a large part of the hinterland might be rendered more secure at a single low-cost stroke.

By What Right?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What is our country coming to? If one man does something that will injure his neighbor, he is liable to arrest and fine, but a body of men are now allowed to combine to the injury of whole cities, if not the entire country.

Supposing 100 men lived at peace on a small island, and two of the number combined to do something to better themselves at the expense or distress of all the rest. Would the two schemers be allowed to carry out their wishes? Common sense says, no!

When the lamented Coolidge was Governor of Massachusetts he would not allow the firemen and policemen to strike, saying such a strike would menace the balance of the people.

Why is such a menace as a general strike allowed? Is it due to a lack of "guts" in Congress? Are they afraid to pass a law forbidding a general strike, at least, for fear such a stand would affect their chances of reelection? It certainly looks that way.

What right has a striking committee to forbid street cars to run, forbid restaurants to open, refuse to allow milk and provision trucks to enter a city?

Advice to Vacationists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the vacation season in full force, the Washington Animal Rescue League appeals to Washingtonians to make provision for their pets before going out of town.

Many vacationists each year desert hundreds of cats, dogs and other domestic pets, either through carelessness, thoughtlessness or haste of departure.

If you are going away, do not desert your pet.

The Washington Animal Rescue League, at 71 O street northwest, telephone North 5730, is both willing and anxious to take this problem over for you.

Give the league a few days' notice before closing your home. Experience has shown that some persons going away for even a short holiday make up their minds on the last day that they no longer desire their animals. These last-minute calls are difficult to answer on time. Consequently, many pets are deserted, and possibly not discovered. MRS. TRUMAN PALMER.

The General's Technique.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While my own opinions of the NRA, of Gen. Johnson, and of the good or harm both have accomplished, would have very little influence, your great newspaper, if it agrees at all with my views, could wield a mighty influence for betterment at least, if it would comment on the following official statement by the general as it deserves:

"There can be no doubt of the authorship of the Darrow board's reply to NRA's answer to its second ebullition. For the first time Clarence is speaking for himself and not through an amanuensis who committed him to Communism without his knowledge. If Clarence had not been more careful Thompson might have committed him to 'isms' which I hesitate to name.

"But here we have dear old Clarence Darrow at his sweetest—at last! The man who asked Mr. Bryan if the fish all drowned in Noah's flood and how the snake navigated before he was cursed to crawl in the dust on his belly is at last speaking for himself. Here, finally, is a flash of heat-lightning in the sunset sky—scintillatingly brilliant but illuminating nothing. . . .

"It's a great gift. Even in the twilight of his powers, I don't know a man with whom I would rather spend an idle hour talking about the Trinil Man or the Piltdown Man or even the Little Man. But, as a finder of fact, he is what is left of the greatest criminal lawyer of our time.

"Dear Clarence, requiescat in pace."

Any man must be on the defensive to indulge publicly in such immoderate language and to risk affronting the President by such violent criticism of one of his appointees.

A very moderate New York political writer recently said: "It has been apparent for some time that NRA has been losing ground. . . . It has defeated its broad program by its trivialities."

If the general's statement were broadcast to the world and a straw vote taken as to whether it proved the administrator a man of small and petty character, would it not be almost unanimously affirmative?

Put 'Em to Work.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that instead of creating comparatively unnecessary jobs for the unemployed in the city, it would be more sensible to employ them in doing more efficiently those jobs which are a part of our normal city life. For instance, garbage used to be collected daily—but now, no matter how high the temperature, it is collected only three times a week.

The streets of our beautiful city are a disgrace to the Nation, littered with paper and trash. Occasionally the gutters are flushed to carry the refuse under parked cars away, but when the flow of water stops, the heaps of refuse which have not reached the sewers, remain to breed flies and germs. Let's have more garbage men and street cleaners. Instead of donating thousands of dollars to the unemployed in relief, why not put them to work to keep our city clean?

Another foolish economy is the reduction of mail deliveries. Why should we be limited to often one delivery daily, because Mr. Farley wants to show a reduction in running expenses of the Postoffice Department? Do you know that mail sent from New England to Washington is delivered sooner than local mail in this town? Yet substitute mail carriers are on relief rolls and are desperately in need of work. We are paying enough taxes, goodness knows, to have all these things properly done, and I think efficient and adequate service is our due.

As a parting shot, let me suggest the appointment of an efficient woman executive to look after the city "housekeeping" department. What does a mere man know about it? No good housekeeper would ever permit trash and ash collectors to follow the street cleaners, for instance. Can you imagine! It happens all the time.

We Are All Gratified.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Monday evening, July 16, Mrs. Jessie Eliot Perez, publicity chairman of this society, brought to the attention of our board of governors the valuable assistance afforded by Mr. Morgan Baker, Federal Diary editor, in our effort to acquaint the Washington public with the existence of our society, and its object "to promote friendly relations among its members, and to serve the interests of the Nation and the State of California."

The board gave consideration to Mrs. Perez's report, and resolved: That a vote of thanks and appreciation be extended to Mr. Baker through the publisher of The Post, as an official act of this society.

From Trail to Highway.

Lord Byron in his "Don Juan" reckoned Daniel Boone, backwoodsman of Kentucky, "the happiest amongst mortals anywhere." He put Boone's name—though he misspelled it—among the great names "which in our faces stare" from history's page and from the inscriptions on monuments. Boone lived a little short of the years granted him by Byron (who had him "hunting up to ninety") and

For which men vainly decimate the throng,
Not only famous, but of that good fame
Without which glory's but a tavern song.

Boone was born 200 years ago, and though his birthday is some months away—in the autumn when the region of his birth is at its best—preparations are being made for its celebration, especially in North Carolina, Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee and Missouri, where he spent his life from early boyhood. But he does not belong to those States alone. Backwoodsman though he was and close to the borders of illiteracy, he has been admitted to America's Hall of Fame and has become, as rated in the Dictionary of American Biography, "one of the most respected and beloved of American heroes."

He has, to be sure, been granted some distinctions which do not belong to him. He was not the discoverer of Kentucky. He was not its first explorer, its first settler or its chief military protector, but he has ample titles to the fame which is his as the "one overshadowing figure of the frontier." One special service was his introduction in the Virginia House of Burgesses (where he sat as a representative of the counties of Kentucky) of the first bill enacted in America for the conservation of forests and game. He pushed on westward when civilization built up to his "darling trees."

The trail of his westering has now become a highway bearing his name, bringing the stretches of mountain, valley and forest, "where the young unawakened world is ever new," within reach of millions who live in the "caged cities," as Lord Byron calls us who inhabit the great towns. This new highway brings near to many something that is still left of the freeborn forest that keeps men free—something of what the trail gave to Boone.

The Dog's Long Day.

Postoffice, Saturday.

WHEN Winks, the President's Llewellyn setter, was buried here last week, Washingtonians remembered that they had a dogs' cemetery—at Silver Spring, Md. Anyhow, many of us had forgotten it. Some of us didn't know that there has been a dog cemetery in Paris these 30 years. Probably very few of us are aware that Paris also has a dog restaurant.

Small blame attaches to that last-mentioned ignorance. The establishment in question, which boasts of being a "first and only," has somehow missed mention in most of the press. It was probably opened when the foreign-news columns, disturbed by a Hitler threat, were making ready to

"Let slip the dogs of war."

Nevertheless, the restaurant exists. What's more, it exists in the most fashionable part of the most fashionable Avenue des Champs Elysees. And, at latest reports, it was thriving.

DOG SOUP
(Consomme containing bread and potatoes.)

CANIPHOS
(Biscuit of dry vegetables and meat.)

MEAT PUDDING
Carrots Spinach
Noodles Rice

Even those coddled canines don't escape spinach!

What's more, vegetarian Parisiennes—and such there are—insist that their dogs be vegetarians, too: for them a special menu is always ready.

So every dog has his day. The Romans, thinking that the dog star, Sirius—rising betimes with the sun from July 3 to August 4—increased the heat and made the Dog Days; but these gay dogs of Paris have dog days the year round, and even the old among them have been taught new tricks. They do not lead a dog's life.

We wonder: Wouldn't they be happier if they did?

Ever since Erigone was led to the grave of her father, Icarios, by the howling of his Maera—of course, you haven't forgotten your Ovid!—mankind in the aggregate seems to have preferred dogs to cats. And it is arguable that, for just this reason, the cats lead a far more agreeable existence.

Richard Jarvis bids us:

"Look at the average dog in the average city apartment and tell me whether the poor beast is really enjoying himself. The more pampered he is, the less he likes it—short of cruelty, of course.

"Jefferson said something or other about the fewer the laws, the better the governed. I say the nearer you come to letting a dog be a dog, the more contented he'll be."

We've been hunting up literary dogs—not so much dogs in literature as dogs in the homes of the makers of literature:

Charles Lamb's Dash must have had rather a good time of it; nobody can imagine Elia being unkind to an animal, nor yet worrying him by overkindness. Sir Walter Scott's deerhound, Maida, probably had excellent reasons for the devotion she showed him—it appears to have been equal to that of his black greyhound, Hamlet, of that of his two Dandy Dinmont terriers.

But if you were dog, would you have liked to be the Bounce of ill-tempered Alexander Pope, the Gallo of erratic Landor, or even that Boatswain whom Byron buried in the garden of Newstead Abbey? Mrs. Browning wrote a pretty poem about her little Flush—it is almost certain that he would have much more appreciated one good fight.

Of course, dogs are loyal. "A dog," says Brewer, to whom we fear that we owe a good deal of the present column, "is placed at the feet of women in monuments to symbolize affection and fidelity." Whereas cats—— Well, if the cat lovers (an ardent minority) will forgive us for mentioning it, loyalty is scarcely a distinguishing feline characteristic.

Not for nothing was the Latin Goddess of Liberty always represented with a cat at her feet! The cat loves the comfort far better than it loves those who provide the comfort; but dogs, like the famous Boy of Prince Rupert of the Rhine, follow their masters to the Battles of Marston Moor—to meet death there.

Had Ulysses' dog Argos been a cat, would he have waited for and recognized the King of Ithaca upon his return from the Trojan War—and then died of joy? Not Argos! He would have forsaken Penelope for one of those lovers she wouldn't listen to—and he would have set up housekeeping in some rival palace.

Loyal, yes. But not stupid. If dogs were stupid, where would be the merit of their loyalty? Did Richard II's greyhound Mathe indeed desert that monarch and attach itself to Bolingbroke? Then Richard, as like as not, loved it so much that he made it eat at the royal table. In the Italian proverb, the dog of the Vicar Arlotto—who is "Neville's dog" in the English proverb—runs away whenever he is called: the Vicar and Neville must have wanted the poor beast to sleep on a cushion.

We
Had rather be a dog and bay the moon
Than such a Roman—
Or Englishman, either!

Carlisle Bargeron

Farewell and Adieu.

MR. BARGERON is on his way to Europe, where, after two weeks or so, his column will be resumed under the title of "Barging Through Europe."

BARGERON

The only trouble about Mrs. Roosevelt's influence on me, I am afraid, is that when I get restless I know no limit. I go on a restlessness orgy. And from that—I know myself—there develops an aggressiveness, such an aggressiveness that lands some men in the hoosegow and others on thrones. It is the latter which I find myself having in mind.

The plain truth is that the New Deal came upon me too fast. I didn't realize its implication or its all-embracingness. I had not dug deep into Mr. Roosevelt's campaign speeches for the promises his biographer, Mr. Ernest Lindley, now says they contained. To me they were just campaign speeches. I was wrong.

I say I was wrong because I was in good with the New Deal. There is no reason, of which I can think, why I could not have gotten in on it. I frankly believe that had I been on my toes or known that it was really the Revolution that was here, Jim Farley would have given me a brain-trusting job somewhere.

• • • •

However, I am not the one to cry over spilt milk. The revolution was organized without my support. As revolutionist after revolutionist got a job, there I was left at the post, without a single planning job to do.

Yet it stands to reason that when it comes to planning I have my planning ambitions. I had never thought there would come the opportunity for most anyone to just step in and begin planning for a nation, though, and for that reason I always held my ambitions in check.

But I am not one to sit around and pine away over not having realized the opportunities for planning which the New Deal afforded. My negligence or lack of foresight there, is, to me, a finished chapter. What I am headed away to do is to find a country that I can run, where I can plan to my heart's content.

In the kaleidoscopic picture of Europe today there must be an opportunity for an up and coming planner. They haven't advertised for any planners over there, I know, but after all that is hardly the way a country goes about getting planners.

As one ambitious to plan, in fact, I hope I shall never see the day when the business of bringing planner and country together is put upon the same sordid basis as that of an employer and a stenographer. The planning profession must be kept on a higher and more exclusive plane. One can appreciate how it would drop were there to appear in the want ad columns a notice reading: "Wanted—A planner. Must be attractive and not given to drink."

The contact between planners and employing countries must be made in a more dignified way than this. The planner should meet the employing country at the club or in some sort of way like that.

• • • •

So what I shall do is just go over there and look the situation over. I shall drop into this country and that country and mosey around. I shall prick up my ears at the hotels, the cafes and on the boulevards and listen intently for any expression of dissatisfaction that I may hear. And if the word should be dropped from any lips to lead me to believe that there is the need or the desire for a planner I shall step up and say: "Here he is."

First I intend to drop into Russia. Of course, I expect no planning openings there. But I shall talk with my fellow planners and ask them what the situation is as regards planners.

I am just a planner looking for a job.

Court for Industry Held Strike Solution

Kansas Law Ruling Public Welfare Is Paramount to Capital; Labor Differences Grew Out of 1919-20 Coal Mine Walkout.

By Hilding Siversen
(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

Topeka, Kans., July 20.—The general strike on the Pacific Coast has called up vivid memories to the people of the Midlands, for there was a time 14 years ago when precisely the same fundamental issue was discussed in Kansas that has recently been agitating California and the Nation.

That fundamental issue concerns the right of organized labor to throttle one or all of the essential industries, such as the production and distribution of food, fuel and medical supplies.

Kansas had a coal strike on its hands in the winter of 1919-20. Alex Howat, one of the most radical of the coal miners' union officials, was virtually in command of the coal fields of southeastern Kansas, and his influence had spread to neighboring States. In fact, he had become a National figure in the sphere of organized labor.

People Were Suffering.

People actually were suffering from the need of fuel. Some Kansas towns were without coal in the dead of winter. Even hospitals were deprived of coal and the situation was rapidly becoming desperate, when Henry J. Allen, then Governor, called out the National Guard and proceeded to mine coal in the name of a sovereign State, on the ground that the need of the people was far more important than the demands of the miners for certain concessions.

There was considerable bitterness and the situation was dramatized vividly. The whole State and soon the entire Nation was talking about the Kansas experiment, which proved successful. Coal was mined and shipped out to needy communities. There was no violence. The miners' union finally bowed to the inevitable, which was the adjustment of labor disputes by some other means than depriving an entire people of one of its chief necessities.

At the same time Gov. Allen realized that the State could not deprive organized labor of the prerogatives or fruits of the strike without providing some adequate substitute, for he had no more sympathy for greedy employers than for radical and destructively ambitious labor leaders.

Industrial Court Created.

Out of the murk and dust of the coal strike there emerged the philosophy of the Kansas Industrial Court. Gov. Allen called a special session of the Kansas Legislature and there was threshed out a set of principles now being discussed widely everywhere in the Nation. The debate in the Kansas State House was comprehensive, dramatic and thorough. Men like Frank P. Walsh, William Allen White, Judge Huggins and F. Dumont Smith, not members of the Legislature, took sides, and the result was a most enlightening forum.

The crux of the debate was whether any organized group of citizens, whether of capital or labor, has the right to exercise economic pressure in such a way as to deprive the public of necessities. The principle of the "general strike" was discussed. It was pointed out that if any organized group is given or achieves the right to control the production and flow of necessities, it is equivalent to a most unbearable tyranny, as Gen. Hugh Johnson effectively pointed out in his Bekeley speech.

The production of necessities, it was argued, is impressed with the public interest. Therefore it is only logical that the public, through its own organized forces, shall reserve the right to safeguard the sources of its supplies of essential products and transportation, regardless of any special interest, through the exercise of police powers of government, which are chiefly invoked in times of emergency. Among the stanch supporters of this theory, in and out of court, was the late Chester I. Long, former Senator from Kansas, and former president of the American Bar Association, who died recently in Washington.

Now Part of General Law.

This philosophy had really been built into the general fabric of the law ever since the earliest days of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence, but not until 1920 was it emphatically or definitely crystallized into specific statutory enactment related to employers and employes.

In restricting the right to strike, this new law contained countervailing provisions which provided organized labor an actual court of law—the Industrial Court—to which it could bring its grievances and have them adjudicated in accordance with equity and evidence. It was intended to be just as fair to organized labor as to the public and the employer. Alex Howat and his lieutenants, however, did not want any of it, for they were firmly committed to the syndicalist technique of the general strike and ruthless economic pressure, brought to bear on friend and foe alike.

"The safety of the public is the supreme law," said Gov. Allen, quoting an old Roman axiom. He backed up his contention with voluminous testimony and precedent. Naturally the public was on his side. The law was enacted and the Industrial Court began functioning.

Labor Took Alarm.

Unfortunately, the antistrike provision was dramatized more extensively than the other vital feature, however, and organized labor everywhere took alarm. Bitter attacks were made upon the court as a whole. Some of the employers fought it, and finally one of them had part of it declared unconstitutional. Ironically, the part that was declared unconstitutional was one of the parts that favored organized labor.

Since that day, however, organized labor has quietly resorted to the provisions of the statute, battered as it has been. Working conditions have been definitely improved in Kansas by virtue of decisions of the Industrial Court.

Some of the students of the Kansas Industrial Court law, by the way, see a parallel in some of the provisions of the Wagner bill.

The point of departure of the philosophy of the Kansas law from previous concepts along similar lines is that it frowns upon the process of arbitration—compulsory or voluntary—on the ground that arbitration is too highly flavored with private and selfish interest and does not sufficiently consider the rights of the public. Judicial settlement is preferred because the court is assumed to be a creature of the State—the public—working constantly with the idea of public welfare uppermost in mind. The contention is that an industrial court is just as much to be trusted with labor disputes as the ordinary civil court may be trusted with disputes over contracts or any other civil relation.

Deprived of Strike Right.

Organized labor was alarmed, however, because in essential industries it took away from them their time-honored weapon, the strike, which, under primitive conditions, "the tooth-and-claw era," was their only method of protecting workers from the greed of exploiting employers.

The people of the Middle West meet such problems as this with rather exceptional clarity of mind and attitude, since they are considerably removed from the points of view of the wealthy employers and of the radical labor organizations. The Mississippi Valley was developed by a people strongly imbued with the American tradition of fair play and the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Any kind of despotic restraint, whether of labor or capital, is intensely irksome. "A plague on both your houses" is the exasperated ultimatum when the private dispute between organized labor and capital becomes a factor to threaten the very lives and welfare of the public.

It is to be expected that this principle will loom greater and greater throughout the Nation, if the present tendency toward numerous strikes increases. San Francisco dramatized the issue again, as it has been dramatized before. People who are compartively independent of both sides of the private industrial disputes will reassert their rights. They will say, "Here! Wait a minute! Where do I come in?" And then both the disputants will have to step aside, all in the name of better government and the right to live, and labor, and eat, and keep comfortable, in a normal, civilized way.

Another Letter From a Dad to His Red-Headed Daughter

By Robert Quillen

My dear Louise:

In story books and in the movies you often find beautiful heroines who are made to seem entirely hollow from the ears up. In any emergency they are wholly useless.

I don't know how they affect you, but when the hero is doing battle with the villain and is sorely in need of a little help, I feel little admiration for the heroine who stands in a terrified trance instead of picking up a vase and clouting the villain on the ear. If there is no vase within reach, she could at least bite him.

Why do the hero and villain battle for such a creature? They could visit some institution and find any number of idiots just as good.

Seriously, my dear, there are few creatures less admirable than the deliberately helpless.

Animals and birds of high and low degree, however inferior, to man, at least surpass him in developing the degree of efficiency required to solve the problems of their existence.

The monkey that can pile one box on another to reach a banana seems more efficient and more worthy of praise than a modern young woman who can't solve the problem of getting her trunk moved from a baggage room to her home.

It used to be the proper thing for a lady to be helpless, but helplessness went out of fashion with hoop skirts and the vapors.

If a modern girl can't keep check stubs in order, or buy a railway ticket for a summer vacation, or order some article of merchandise by telegraph, or have a carburetor adjusted, or do something for a person who has fainted or drowned or broken a leg, she is just plain dumb.

Assuming the possession of ordinary common sense, efficiency is largely a matter of self-confidence and practice. And the more you practice, the more confidence you will have.

Make it a practice to tackle every little problem you meet without asking for help. What if you do make mistakes? That is the quickest way to learn. Even great scientists make progress that way.

There is nobody more admirable than a self-reliant girl who can do anything that is necessary. And that kind of girl gets the most fun out of life. Love, DAD.

Jungle Slaves.

Leading up to this title in a roundabout way much in favor among columnists, essayists, and gentlemen about to ask for a loan, do you remember how Thomas Huxley (grandfather of Aldous and Julian) set out to prove that there was always a great deal of red clover in the country districts abounding in old maids?

THEO. HALL.

That would seem one of the most far-fetched ideas on earth. Yet Huxley went about in this way—red clover needs bumblebees to fertilize it by carrying pollen from one blossom to another, but mice kill bumblebees. Mice, in turn, are killed by cats, and of course every old maid keeps a cat. So the presence of old maids allows clover to flourish.

Only less neat as a linked chain of events in nature is the scene with which Mrs. Phoebe Haggard opens her novel, "Red Macaw" (Scribner, $2), a tale of slaves and masters in the Brazilian jungle from 1800 to 1900.

In the jungle, it seems, grow the great sapucaia trees, with huge nut pods. Also on the scene are macaws in the tree tops, pumas on the ground, Indians lurking behind the trees, and white men with guns playing possum nearby. The action is, as follows—a macaw gets its head stuck in a pod and struggles wildly until it and the pod fall to the ground together; the puma springs on the macaw; the Indian spears the puma; and the white man steps out and shoots the Indian in the back.

• • • •

The two Fernandez brothers, who had bought virgin land from the Emperor of Brazil, stepped out like that in 1800 and found one macaw still living, with a broken wing. Tamed, taught an astounding vocabulary, Arara, the red macaw lived on among the 400 slaves brought from Africa to settle the wilderness, became the especial friend of the comely young slave-girl Philomena.

Joao Fernandez, after keeping Philomena tied night and day to a post because she resisted his advances, was struck by lightning. Brother Jose killed his young wife in a fit of jealousy, grew into an unbelievably cruel and sadistic old man. When whipping his slaves seemed too mild and he had attached a mechanical flogging device to his mill-wheel, he was its first victim. The slaves stole his body, cut it into little bits and buried these among the coffee-bushes. No one would blame their last revenge.

Older and older grew Philomena and Arara together, talking and clucking to each other. In 1888, when the slaves were freed, Philomena wandered from the plantation. Later she returned an old crone with a century on her back. Arara still dragged its broken wing, still clucked joyously, but where was Genuino, who had been her lover years and years ago? Philomena tottered into the forest, calling his name. Once again Arara climbed a sapucaia tree, got stuck in a nutpod. When bird and nut crashed down together, old Philomena too was dead.

Mrs. Haggard, who has lived in Brazil 15 years and speaks 16 languages, fills her first novel with a superabundance of nature lore and local color. When she treats of the pleasanter side of her scenes, she verges on soft romantics (though the harsher aspects are told with more impressive calmness). Further, her plot is far too given to the over-easy dramatics of moral retribution.

But all this can be discounted. For the story of these slaves—crushed by endless brutality but still brave, kind, and loyal—stands as a sincere and highly moving narrative of human endurance. Mrs. Haggard makes us live in those iron shackles, beneath those bloody whips.

• • • •

We keep ourselves lonely by setting up our own barriers—such is the moral of Guy Pocock's mild but pleasing novel, "Design for a Staircase" (Dutton, $2.50). Eight families lived about one staircase in a London block of flats (a neat diagram shows you just where), most properly oblivious of each other's prescence until a fire in the place gets them suddenly, if informally, introduced. With the ice broken, friendship and romance leap up at once.

This tale of very nice, ordinary people getting into a deal of complications should be a welcome sedative on hot days.

Rich Mrs. Blotz, climbing merrily for social honors in Europe, wants an impoverished noblewoman in tow. A poor but clever girl succeeds in filling the bill. When this "duchess by appointment" finds high life so attractive that she wishes to stay there, all the resources of a light but tricky plot are called upon to preserve the hoax. A vastly amusing souffle.

• • • •

Sara Ware Bassett's "Turning Tide" (Penn, $2) rewards a girl's courage with faithful love. An unambitious tale of Cape Cod by a specialist in the romantic field.

• • • •

Maurice Walsh's "The Road to Nowhere" (Stokes, $2.50) is a sweet and reassuring novel of the west of Ireland, with a wandering tinker and an honest-hearted poacher with a tongue full of Blarney and a lovely red-headed girl.

Mr Walsh is spoken of as the successor to that 100 per cent romantic Irishman (born in Brooklyn), Donn Byrne. "The Road to Nowhere" indicates this with every possible sign.

LETTER FROM A VACATIONING BUSINESS MAN TO HIS PARTNER.

Dear Gus: Well, I am up here in the woods getting a complete rest from everything. Nothing bothers me and it is wonderful to get my mind off everything at the office and relax. Just thought I would drop this little note to let you know everything is fine. Yours,

BARTHOLOMEW.

• • • •

P. S.—How is the code matter coming on and did you get it all straightened out with Johnson yet? I read a piece in the paper this morning that he is still obdurate on the point involved. I hope you are keeping after the matter and that you will succeed in getting what we want.

By the way, when does that municipal tax on business come due and how do we have to pay it? Will you look this up and drop me a line, as I am completely in the dark about it and can not make head or tail of it up here in the woods?

• • • •

N. B.—Did we get that contract from Schlepperhorn Bros? When I left for my vacation I talked with Joe and he said we would surely get it and that he would wire me. I have heard nothing further. Shoot me a telegram whether we got it or not, as I am deeply concerned over this. It would be a nice piece of business.

Did you see that piece in the papers that the Governor thinks that State income tax will have to be increased next year? I read it at breakfast this morning just before going fishing. I can't believe the Governor is serious. Have Jake look into this. If they tax us any more we might as well transfer our business to some other State.

How has business been since I left? Did Clinchbaum settle or will he have to sue him? Can't we collect something on those credit accounts this month if we make a hard drive? Speak to Max about this. Did you see anything about carloadings for the last month? I have been watching for the report in the papers, but haven't seen it, and am anxious to know whether there was any big falling off or not.

• • • •

P. S.—Did you take care of that monthly alimony check to Freda as I told you to? How did Milton come out in that automobile case and is Minna over the pneumonia?

FRAUD!

I feel all hot and bothered,
I know that I've been sold;
I'd like to see the man who said
This summer would be cold!

RETURN SLIPS.

The mail man never turns me down.
He is the most obliging elf,
But all the mail he ever brings
Are little letters from myself.

I send my things around the town,
But editors are tough old rips.
They very neatly turn me down,
And load me with rejection slips.

But while the three-cent stamps hold out,
'Way in the future and beyond,
I'll keep on writing to myself—
For I just love to correspond.

$300,000 Involved In Patent Fight

Danville, Va., July 20 (Spl.).—A suit which may enrich William H. Ferguson, textile operative, Leaksville, N. C., by $300,000 has been filed in the United States court here against the Riverside and Dan River Mills.

Ferguson claims to have a patent on a machine stand which, he alleges, has been used without authorization by the mill for six years. The device is a circular role which permits hasty stitching of certain products without stopping the machinery.

Ferguson has assigned his interest to George Dillon, who appears nominally as the plaintiff. Judge Paul is asked to name a special master in order that profits alleged to be accruing to the plaintiff may be determined. The case will be heard in September.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Reading as an Anesthetic.

I have just been reading a splendid murder story by H. C. Bailey, called "Shadow on the Wall." It is perhaps strange, when murder as a fact is so horrible, that murder in fiction should be so charming and delightful. But this is certainly true. The reason is perhaps that when one reads it as a story it is romance; it is like taking a vacation, for most of us do not have murder as part of our daily experience; anyhow, not yet or often. To read about people who are suffering from poverty or sickness is to have simply a repetition of our own familiar difficulties; but to read about murder and detectives is to enter the magic land of romance. Take my own case. I have met in novels hundreds and hundreds of clever detectives, yet in my long life I have actually never met one—not a single detective. In fiction I have encountered hundreds of cold-blooded murders; yet so far as I know, not a single one of my intimate friends is a murderer.

I find murder stories rather more interesting than stories of the war—of any war; because a single murder, or murder one at a time, that is murder by retail, is more interesting than wholesale murder.

It is also true that the majority of readers of murder stories are intelligent men and women; they are people who have a good deal of work to do, and whose minds really need a rest. An exciting murder story diverts the mind, takes it off one's own troubles, and thus gives it relief.

I divide all readers into two classes—those who read to remember and those who read to forget. That is, there are people who read to obtain information, facts, or ideas; knowledge or inspiration; and there are those who read merely for recreation; they read to forget. It is unfortunate if people read only to forget. But there are times when everyone must read to forget; one is in poor health, or one has had financial reverses, or one has lost a friend, or one is worried; then there is nothing like a good story to make the mind forget its difficulties. There never was a more serious man than the old Scotsman, Thomas Carlyle; well, once, when the entire manuscript of a book he had written was accidentally destroyed, Carlyle read Capt. Marryat's sea stories for three weeks steadily, in an endeavor to forget his loss and relieve his mind.

There are thousands of people nowadays who read themselves to sleep every night. They have increased in number enormously since the war; and their numbers were doubled and trebled since the crash of 1929. A good murder story is better than a drug or any kind of a sleeping mixture. No hotel bedroom is properly furnished nowadays unless there is a reading light at the head of the bed.

A good story is a fine anesthetic. Suppose you are obliged to travel on a railroad train, especially if it is a poor train, and dull scenery. Once I was obliged to take a train where the locomotive made a house-to-house canvas; the engineer, fireman, conductor and brakeman had long intimate conversations with their friends along the road; the train waited while some passenger had his hair cut; how on earth could I have endured the 24 hours of that interminable journey if I had not been well supplied with exciting novels?

Club Dances Lend Gayety To Summer

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Chevy Chase Club on a dance night in summer is one of the delightful spots of Washington. Gay groups don their coolest garb to dine on the clubhouse porch, and to dance later on the terrace under the stars. The club schedules dancing parties regularly on Thursday and Saturday evenings.

A sign at the door, "Pool Open Tonight," attracted many of the braver and more energetic youngsters Thursday evening to take a dip before joining the dancers.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming had a group of guests for dinner, including Mr. and Mrs. John Oliver LaGorce, Mr. Sidney Taliaferro and Mr. Ronald Ransom, of Atlanta. Mrs. Fleming, in a white crepe gown of Grecian simplicity, looked as young as her pretty daughter, Miss "Dolly" Fleming. Her daughter, who was as usual the "belle of the ball," wore a dainty frock of flowered chiffon. Mrs. LaGorce was in a frock of soft golden-brown chiffon with a sash of turquoise blue taffeta.

Mr. LaGorce returned recently from a trip to Chicago. Mr. Taliaferro left yesterday afternoon for Rehoboth Beach, Del., to join Mrs. Taliaferro for the week-end. Mrs. Taliaferro is spending several weeks there.

Johnstons Attend.

In another party were Mr. and Mrs. John E. Parker, Mr. John Lewis Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Ada Johnston. Mr. Johnston was in the Department of Justice several years ago.

After leaving the Capital they made their home in New York, but recently returned to this vicinity and are busy settling themselves in their new home in Maryland. They spend most of the time in the country, and take frequent cruises abroad their yacht. Thursday evening, Mrs. Parker wore a frock of white organdie with tiny embroidered red dots, a deep, off-the-shoulder fischu trimmed with red rick-rack and a red sash. Mrs. Johnston was in a gown of citron yellow chiffon, with a ruffled train, and a sash of bright green satin.

Lieut. and Mrs. Chester Wood were there, the latter in a printed chiffon frock of pale brown and lemon-yellow shades, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ravenel. Nancy Ravenel was in a frock of red and white mousseline, much beruffled, with a swirling skirt. During the evening, the orchestra played several times, "Happy Birthday to You," for her and Mrs. Wood, who both celebrated their birthday anniversaries Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashmead Fuller, who make their home at the club, had a few guests with them, among them Mr. Reeve Hoover. Mrs. Hoover, with their three small children, is spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. William J. Tully, at her summer home, Almar, at Locust Valley, Long Island. Mrs. Fuller wore a gown of printed linen in shades of blue and white, fashioned with a deep V neckline and a long flowing skirt.

Guest Groups.

Miss Mary Dwight, daughter of Mrs. John Henry Dwight, who is lingering in town for a last few days before going to Gibson Island, Md., for the remainder of the summer, was a picture in a trailing white crepe gown vastly becoming to her tawny, sun-tanned skin and blonde hair. Miss Dwight's particular beau of the evening was young Mr. Kent Legg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar K. Legg, jr., who recently returned to the Capital from Yale University from which he was graduated last month.

Former Representative and Mrs. S. Wallace Dempsey were in a little group which included Justice and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, who have just returned from a two-week sojourn in Rehoboth Beach. Mrs. Dempsey has been at her former home in Lockport, N. Y., for a short visit, and recently rejoined Mr. Dempsey at the club where they are stopping this summer. They are planning to leave shortly for a trip to Europe.

Mrs. Henri de Sibour was present, looking most charming in a frock of the palest blue crepe with a skirt of scalloped tiers; the Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, Senor Don Ramon Padilla, recently returned from a vacation in Nonquitt, Mass., and New York; Senor Don Luis Olivares, First Secretary of the Embassy, who has been in Newport; Miss Marie Slaven, wearing a smart printed crepe dinner gown; Miss Laura Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, wearing a gown of deep turquoise blue crepe with a square decolletage edged with black velvet and finished with a large bow of the velvet, and the handsome Mrs. Frances Pearson Rust, wearing the same gown in white.

Miss Eunice Jameson Sets Day for Wedding

Miss Eunice Jameson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Minor S. Jameson, has chosen Saturday, September 1, as the date for her marriage to Mr. John B. Fox, of Hingham, Mass.

The ceremony will be held at noon in the historic old First Church, in Bennington, Vt., and a reception will follow at the home of Mrs. Jameson's brother-in-law and sister, former Representative and Mrs. Morton D. Hull.

Mrs. F. Wilkinson Bunker will remain in Washington until early in August when she will go to Evanston, Ill., to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Wilkinson.

Art Exhibit At Rehoboth Set Tuesday

Plan Reviewed by Guests at Tea Given by Mrs. Corkran.

Mrs. W. S. Corkran entertained at tea Wednesday at Rehoboth Beach, Del. Plans were discussed for the art exhibition to be held by the Village Improvement Association at Rehoboth Beach, opening next Tuesday and continuing to August 10.

The guests assembled on the porch of the Dutch colonial home of Mrs. Corkran, overlooking a lovely old fashion flower garden. Shells from the beach, a pilot wheel, a wall light fashioned out of a large hornet's nest, and magnolia blooms in old ginger jars lend a quaint atmosphere to the porch.

Mrs. Corkran, in a brief speech, pointed out that the forthcoming exhibit is the sixth annual showing to be held for visiting summer artists and for local talent.

Mrs. Howard Brokaw, daughter of the late Howard Pyle, famous Delaware artist, presented four pictures made by her father for the exhibition.

By Malvina Lindsay,

MAUDE ADAMS, 63 years old, has come back to the stage. Schumann-Heink, at 73, is still trouping. Marie Dressler, before she became ill, was, at the age of 65, one of the best box-office attractions in the movies. And now Mrs. George Aldridge, 75, of Toronto, is reported making a name for herself in the pulpit as well as playing leapfrog on the beach.

Numerous other examples could be cited to show the valiant stand women are making against the years. They seem to have taken up the battle against time where men left off.

Yet, strangely enough, agelessness was once a masculine prerogative. Back in the days when women donned caps at 25, men up to the age of 90 were marrying young wives. Later, when women were relegated to social and business oblivion at 40, men who were on the verge of mounting wheel chairs were still orating, dancing, running businesses, getting elected to office and serving as dinner partners for debutantes.

• • • •

THAT a woman aged more quickly than a man, and that she was out of the running at a time when he had reached his prime were commonly accepted truisms. Then one day men woke up to find the tables turned.

Very quietly women had staged one of the greatest revolts in the history of their sex. Very gently and very firmly they had pulled off their caps and gone to the beauty shop. They had thrown down their knitting and joined clubs. And instead of going to live with daughters-in-law, they had gotten jobs or set out on European jaunts.

Today sees them with complete age emancipation in dress and social activity. It sees them yearly pushing further back the age barriers in business and professional self-expression. It sees them in their later decades as the dominant forces in most of the movements for social and cultural betterment.

This feminine achievement has by no means been entirely due to the beauty shop, though that has helped. Woman's relentless concern with preserving her looks—and necessarily her health—has given her in some measure a physical advantage over man.

• • • •

BUT the true source of her renewed youth is an awakened interest in living. And for this much credit is due the so-called women's movements. These, even in their crudest forms, have stirred into activity the congealed minds of myriads of women. Laugh at the feminine culture craze all you will, it has enabled untold women to carry into their lonely years incorruptible treasures of spirit.

In their pursuit of a vigorous and attractive old age women are reaching toward another rung in the ladder of civilization. Serenity and power in old age are peculiarly the attributes of the more highly developed members of the human race. The old animal, the old savage usually embody the ugliest characteristics of their species. As a rule, the cruder the person, the more unlovely and futile in old age. If, as Mr. Shaw maintains, mankind is only mentally and emotionally ready to live by the time it must die, then any advance in making the years count is a step in creative evolution. And just now women seem to be leading the way "back to Methuselah."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: About four months ago I fell in love with a very fine young man and I had every reason to believe my affection was returned. He "rushed" me a good deal and treated me wonderfully.

However, after he realized that he had made me care a lot, he did all sorts of things to make me hate him. The reason for this was that he was in love with another girl whom he had known a long time before he met me. The only reason that he had paid so much attention to me was that he thought he hadn't a chance with the other girl and he did like me a great deal.

• • • •

Recently, she had given him cause to hope that she was in love with him. Therefore, he was trying to break off with me without letting me know the real reason. He was just going to let me think that he was not the person I thought he was.

When he began to act this way I at first thought he was just temperamental, but I soon realized he was doing all that deliberately and of course suspected there was another girl. One night I confronted him with my suspicion and he confirmed it. He told me the facts of the case as I have stated them above. The whole affair had been on my mind so long that I was pretty well wrought up and said a few rash things I would like to recall. He asked me if we couldn't still be friends and if he couldn't still come to see me.

I told him I didn't think I could stand going out with him when I knew he would rather be with some other girl. However, he persuaded me to let him come to see me some time. He left, saying he would be back. I haven't seen him since that night—over a month ago.

Of course, I am sorry now for letting my pride interfere with our friendship. We always got along so well and seemed to agree on almost everything. I would like very much to have him as a friend, but how can I go about letting him know that? We have no mutual friends who could drop a hint. Would a note be proper? If so, what should I say? Don't tell me to forget. I can't.

EVELYNE E.

A Fine Thing.

DEAR EVELYNE E.: A note to the boy telling him you repent your hasty words and are willing to take him back on terms of friendship would not be improper, but neither would it be wise.

• • • •

He chose to walk out on you, a frank, steadfast, companionable sweetheart, in full possession of the knowledge you care for him, to pursue a fickle will-o'-the-wisp. Don't break your heart by thinking that you sent him away and that your harsh words withheld might have kept him at your side. He went because he wanted to; and by the same token, he will come back, if he cares enough to come.

You did a fine and courageous thing in sending him off with no weak plea for friendship, after he told you he cared for another girl. Pride is always a woman's best ally in a situation of this kind.

• • • •

The straightforward simplicity of your letter shows you to be a girl of character and common sense. You know as well as I what you should do. "Don't tell me to forget," you say. "I can't." You know you must. I know you can.

What you shrink from is the pain of the present. But in the long run, pride and silent endurance will prove a more effective poultice than pining and pursuit.

No. 1 Player and Many Others Are Converted to Brief Shorts

Mrs. Martinez Says "No More Dresses Flapping Around My Knees;" Mrs. Thompson Advocates Hairnets; Mrs. McIntyre Won't Have Sleeves.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

WEARING colors on the tennis court is as bad as serving "doubles," say those who whack the ball across the net with seldom a miss. White is the proper thing, whether it is worked out in linen, wool or silk. The majority of players settled upon white long ago, and the woman who appears on a court in red or blue or yellow is considered lacking in sportsmanship, since the unexpected color distracts her opponent.

But after this one rule has been observed, players in the District manage to achieve plenty of variety in their tennis costumes. Some wear shorts. Some wear dresses. Some take turn about.

"The most comfortable things I've ever worn," said Mrs. Ruth Martinez, No. 1 player in the District, as she told yesterday of her conversion to shorts. "I tried them for the first time about ten days ago. Since then I've worn nothing else while playing. They give freedom and they're cool. No more will I have dresses flapping around my knees."

Made to Order.

Now she is won over to shorts, Mrs. Martinez is planning to have some made to order. The material will be heavy linen and, of course, will be white. The shorts she has been wearing have narrow blue stripes up the sides, one stripe to a pair. With them she wears blue and white striped socks. But when she gets her custom made ones, she plans to wear plain white socks.

She prefers mannish blouses with small roll collars and cap sleeves. And she always wears a visor because she has found it concentrates her vision on the court.

Dresses, one-piece pique affairs, are worn by Mrs. Connie Thompson, another tennis expert.

"I have them made to order, with lots of pleats in the skirts," she said yesterday. "They're always sleeveless. I can't play in sleeves, not even in those funny little shoulder caps. The necklines vary. I have square ones, round ones, and V ones."

Mrs. Thompson, who has arranged many District tournaments, plays bareheaded; no visor, no bandanna, no ribbon. But she admitted she found hair nets a great help in keeping her tresses under control.

More Stripes.

Another bareheaded player is Miss Peggy Keyser who wields a racquet with dexterity on the Columbia Club's courts. Cotton shorts, sometimes decorated with a narrow blue or yellow stripe, and soft cotton-knit shirt form her idea of the perfect tennis costume. To this combination she adds white golf socks and regulation tennis shoes. Most of her shirts are sleeveless. Some of them are of the polo variety and have short sleeves.

Miss Nora McIntyre, who does most of her playing at the Army and Navy Country Club, takes turns with shorts and dresses. When she wears the former she tops them off with pique shirts whose sleeves are mere caps and whose collars are small. Her dresses are always one-piece, have pleated skirts, no sleeves, and are cut low in the back.

Miss Martha Louise Smith, who also plays at Army and Navy, has a speck of color on her shorts costumes. Blue buttons trim some of them. Red buttons give zip to others. And when she wears the shorts with blue buttons, she tucks a blue handerchief in the pocket of her pique shirt. A red handkerchief matches the red buttons.

"Then there's a wrap-around skirt to go over the shorts when I've finished playing," said Miss Smith.

Her shirts have short sleeves. Her favorite socks are cotton.

"And I wear hair nets," she added.

For Rush Week.

QUESTION: I am planning to enter a Midwestern University in the fall and I will undoubtedly receive a rush from my mother's sorority. She went to this same university I am planning to attend. Mother doesn't seem to realize clothes are a lot more important now than when she went to school. She says I will need only four or five outfits for rush week. But I think I should have enough dresses so I can appear at each party in something different. Don't you think I'm right?

ANSWER—If you have a different costume for every affair in rush week I'm afraid you'll be spending all your time getting in and out of clothes. Your mother's plan is much better. Four or five outfits should be plenty for all the parties given by a sorority for its prospective pledges. And while each sorority wants members who dress in good taste, even with distinction, it isn't interested in a new student simply because she has trunkloads of clothes. The girl who thinks of nothing but her appearance has no time to think of anything else, which makes her a pretty dull companion.

Here's what you'll need: A dashing town costume, including coat or jacket, for daytime affairs; a spectator sports costume will see you through breakfast parties; two or three dinner dresses will be sufficient, and you'll need one formal evening gown. Choose things suitable for fall and please listen to your mother when she advises you against clothes that are too old for you. Freshmen girls make a big mistake when they try to look like seniors. There's lots of time for that later on.

Big Feet Problem.

QUESTION: There's no doubt about it, I have big feet. In the winter and fall I manage to get by pretty well because black shoes do not increase the size of their appearance. But I don't like to wear black shoes with light summer dresses. Yet I imagine white shoes make my feet look even bigger than they are. Is this right or do I merely imagine it?

ANSWER: White does have a tendency to make things look large. But if you wear white or light summer dresses your feet would be much less conspicuous in white shoes than in black ones. Avoid fancy sandal types and stick to plain oxfords and pumps.

Play at Home Would Lower Child Deaths

This, the last of a series of articles on child recreation, shows how backyard playgrounds prevent accidents.

By Elizabeth Perrow.

A BRIGHT, shiny ball rolling across the street, an intent youngster darting in and out of traffic in pursuit of it. Grinding brakes, shrill cries, a limp little body lifted from under the wheels of an automobile.

"Child killed while at play," announce the headlines boldly. Parents, reading, are panic stricken—suppose it had been their child!

Three hundred Washington children, all under five years of age, were killed in such automobile accidents last year. Five thousand children were killed throughout the country, and 20,000 were injured. Statistics show the death rate of children under five has increased 40 per cent in the past five years, as a result of automobile accidents. Records also show nearly all these children were killed while playing in the streets near their homes.

Summer Dangerous.

"Forty per cent of these children are killed during the four summer months," T. F. Behler, assistant director of traffic and safety of the American Automobile Association, said yesterday.

"In the summer children want to play out of doors. And not having any place to play at home, they play in the streets. Often they are too young to go to public playgrounds. They play ball games, dodging in and out of traffic and catch rides on the backs of cars. They aren't willfully courting death; all they want is a place to play."

Alarmed at the increase in the number of child deaths resulting from automobile accidents, the American Automobile Association is encouraging parents to fit up their back yards as playgrounds for their children, Mr. Behler said.

"Leading cities all over the country have conducted playground contests most successfully," he said. "Where the parents have been interested and cooperative the death rate has steadily decreased.

Easy to Build.

"Many parents object to building playgrounds because they have little room and because of the expense. But there are few homes where enough space is not available. Often by cleaning up thoroughly and removing less important things room can be made for a small playground. The mother who is worried for fear she will have to give up her garden will not hesitate if she thinks of a playground as the means of providing safety for her children.

"Playgrounds need not be expensive. Inexpensive and suitable apparatus can be made at home. Children prefer home-made toys to expensive ones from stores. And even if there is some initial cost, the expense is warranted by the increased safety of the child. Even a minor traffic accident would cost more than a good playground."

Naturally, a back-yard playground will attract other children in the neighborhood, Mr. Behler said, but there are few problems of discipline if the owner makes it plain naughtiness will not be tolerated.

And if children have happy places to play when they are young they will be fonder of their homes and will not look for pleasures elsewhere when they reach adolescence, he points out.

Use of Water For the Face Isn't Injurious

By Frances Mangum.

ONE of the best known beauty fallacies concerns soap and water. Some beauticians exclaim loudly against it. Others, a trifle more conservative, condone it "now and then."

As a matter of fact soap isn't in the least injurious to the skin. But that means good soap; naturally there are certain kinds that are too strong. And of course there are skins so sensitive any soap will cause them to break out.

Brushes and Cloths.

Generally speaking, however, a good olive oil soap will do more good than harm. If it is used at night and in the morning, occasionally with a wash cloth, at other times with a complexion brush, it will help purge pores of dust and eradicate blackheads. As soon as the pores are freed of foreign matter they will begin to grow smaller. Consequently it is important to attack them from the cleansing angle whether it be by soap or cream.

Just because a woman washes her face thoroughly with soap and water does not mean she should disdain creams. In some cases they will do a more penetrating job of cleansing than soap. Besides, they soften the skin and lubricate it.

After the usual face washing the skin is inclined to feel drawn. This is but a matter of a few seconds if a bit of cream is massaged or patted on immediately.

Make the Soap Good.

Most important of all, use good soaps. For every-day cleansing purposes the olive oil soap is a good bet, but if there is going to be a battle royal with blackheads, it's best to use one a trifle stronger. Avoid those with free alkali, however. A beauty specialist of wide repute sponsors soap grains which she vows will remedy any case of blackheads, no matter how stubborn. The grains are a bit powerful and should not be used more than two or three times a week.

A soap company which for years has manufactured the aristocrats of soaps—and sold them at fairly aristocratic prices—is coming out with one in a few days which is made of lettuce oil. It is supposed to possess amazing properties for purging pores.

People Aid Mrs. Dougherty, in the Name of Charity for Needy Children.

MRS. John Allan Dougherty has a gift for getting people to do things for her, and countless children have benefited thereby. Whenever she calls upon her friends to donate office space, furniture, food, clothes, money and their services in the interest of child welfare they readily comply.

• • • •

She organized the charity inaugural ball when Harding was made President, and $26,000 was realized to pay off a mortgage on the Child Welfare Society building on G street. She organized similar balls at the inauguration of Presidents Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt. She was the local chairman of the President's Birthday Ball that raised a large sum for the Warm Springs endowment fund.

• • • •

She created the Thrift Shop and gave a year to selling the idea to Washington, putting in many hours daily. At present she is interested in a club for boys in Precinct No. 5, where juvenile delinquency is prevalent.

It is easy, from her standpoint, to get people to help "because everybody is interested in children." Perhaps her success in organizing charity benefits on a large scale is due to a striking personality based on intelligence, heart and classical set of features. She does not spare herself and perhaps that explains in part the amazing willingness of others to help her, that and her pleasing voice that never utters a tactless word.

• • • •

Friend of Royalty.

Mrs. Dougherty says Mrs. John R. Williams, chairman of the Thrift Shop and known as "Ma" Williams, "beats me all hollow." They work together on many charity projects.

• • • •

She is the widow of a naval attache. She resided in Tokyo for several years, where she became a personal friend of Prince and Princess Kuni, the parents of the Empress of Japan. When they visited Europe and America Mrs. Dougherty was the only foreign woman in the diplomatic corps in Japan invited to be a member of their entourage. She has been selected as a delegate to accompany Father Nevils, president of Georgetown University; Judge John Barton Payne and Miss Mabel Boardman to the Red Cross convention in Tokyo next October.

She will be interested to see what progress has been made in China by the child welfare organizations she was asked to establish in 1928 by Mme. Yuan Shih K-ai, wife of the Chinese president.

Women Will Cast Votes Soon in Chile

Will Have Voice Only in Municipal Elections.

Santiago, Chile, July 20 (AP).—Chilean women will go to the polls for the first time in this country's history at the next municipal election in Santiago.

The new law allows them to cast ballots only in municipal, not in the national elections, as literate Chilean men may do.

The same legislation which offered literate women their first step in suffrage also decreed municipal votes for literate adult foreigners of both sexes who have been in Chile five years.

Cost of Living Increases 6.3% for Wage Earners

The cost of living for the families of wage earners and lower salaried workers increased 6.3 per cent during the period from June, 1933, to June, 1934, according to the survey of the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor.

This survey which covers 32 cities widely scattered throughout the country, also shows an increase of 1 per cent in the cost of living during the 6 months' period ended June, 1934.

Feminine Figures Slimmer in Turkey

Emancipation Is Bringing More Gayety, Too.

Istanbul, July 20 (U.P.).—That the Turkish feminine form and character are changing for the better under the stimulus of emancipation, is the opinion of Selim Sirri Bey, inspector general of education and physical culture.

In physique, he said, the Turkish woman is becoming slimmer. The former leisurely, restricted harem life produced extra poundage.

This has been altered now that there are 2,500 gymnastic teachers training the boys and girls and 300 professors of physical culture from the higher gymnastic school at Ankara educating the youth of the country in games and physical exercises.

"Our women's forms are getting spare and vigorous," said Selim Sirri Bey. "This changes character, too. They are much gayer than they were. This comes from the new open-air life and from the mixing of men and women."

Selim Sirri Bey is the organizer of the great massed gymnastic demonstrations by boys and girls together, which may now take place in Turkey every May.

British Gloria, Model de Luxe, Attains Status of an Institution

The Slim Blonde, Famous Throughout England, Has Almost Forgotten Her Real Name Because It's Never Used; Few Others Know It.

LONDON, July 20 (AP).—England's best known model is more than an individual. She's an institution.

Her name is Gloria—no more, no less.

She's as famous in the world of modelling as Big Ben is in the world of clocks, and as British.

Even an automobile has been named for her.

She ought to be well known. Her pictures peep from magazine stands, from newspaper columns and from catalog 60,000,000 times a week. Some day, she hopes, that average will be boosted to 100,000,000.

Gloria is a blonde and has large blue eyes. She has a pleasant voice and an informal way of meeting people. She's "over 20."

Her face is lively and full of expression. It's fresh. She wouldn't be a good model if it weren't. "You can never afford to look tired," she explains.

Trademark by Gloria.

Gloria was a pet name given her when she was a child and she's almost made it a trademark. Few, very few, people know her real name. She herself says she's almost forgotten it, not because it's so long since she was a child but because her full name is never used.

Ever since she was as high as a bale of wool in her native Yorkshire, she wanted to be a model. Her parents, Wesleyan Methodists, frowned at first, then tried to laugh her out of the idea.

But Gloria was adamant and back in the short-skirt days she hied herself to the biggest nearby city, Manchester. She immediately found a job in her chosen calling.

She only stayed 12 months because, first and foremost, she's so ambitious. She wanted to get to the top—so she quit to go to school.

There she learned, by walking with a pile of books on her head, the proper way to carry herself, and by other methods the rest of the ABC's of a model's training. Seven years ago she came to London.

The average model sought in England, she says, "must be young, slim, have a good figure, be good looking and have a fair amount of intelligence."

Gloria meets the mark in everything but height. The average model here is 5 feet 8 inches tall. She misses that figure by 2 inches, but high heels make up the deficit when necessary. She weighs 124 pounds.

A Big Income.

Gloria won't tell you what she earns, but she winces if you bring up the subject of income taxes. She will say, however, that the average model gets a guinea ($5 at par) for each photograph for which she poses, the illustrator doing his work from the picture. Models who sit for artists are paid by the hour.

But Gloria isn't open to all commissions. She's under contract with Selfridge's and though she can get permission for outside work, if the product doesn't compete with that of her store, she won't permit her face to be attached to too many products.

"That tends to cheapen one," she said.

Her normal working day lasts from 10 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock at night. After that, if the day has been strenuous, she stretches out in her apartment with a good book. Her choice runs to thrillers when the day has been particularly trying.

Occasionally she must be seen at some fashionable hotel or in some society haunt. That's all a part of the game.

She does a little of a lot of things, because she must keep up with the world and a model, as she explains, "never finishes her training."

She smokes a little, drinks a little. Both as recreation and to keep herself in trim for her work, she rides, golfs and swims a little.

"It wouldn't do, though," she said, "to develop any muscles."

The well-known Gloria, English model, has made enough impression upon the life of the British Isles even to have a car named after her.

Washington's Baby Rate Higher Than Last Week

Two hundred and thirty new babies arrived in Washington last week. This is a 6 per cent increase over the preceeding week.

But the increased birth rate in Washington is proportionally much lower than in New York, where 2,282 babies were born last week. This is the greatest number born in one week in that city since the depression.

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. What is the meaning of debacle and how is the word pronounced?

2. Define and pronounce the italicized word in this sentence: "Her overbearing attitude to other employes convinced them she was dangerously near being a megalomaniac.

3. Is police properly called POleece or PLEECE?

4. Is it correct to pronounce secretary with two syllables, English-fashion? Where is the accent?

5. What is the difference between a shilling and a schilling.

Check Answers Here.

1. Debacle is literally the breaking up of ice in a stream, or the rush of water that follows. Used more commonly to mean a sudden break-up, a stampede, a rout. Pronounced either de-BAW-k'l or de-BAK-l.

2. A megalomaniac, pronounced meg-a-lo-MAY-ni-ac, is a person suffering from delusions of grandeur.

3. Police is po-LEECE, not PLEECE.

4. Secretary is accented on the first syllable, but all four syllables must be pronounced. SEK-re-tay-ri, not SEK-try.

5. A shilling is a British coin, now worth about 24 cents. A schilling is an Austrian coin, now worth about 23 cents.

Gershwin Hunts a Score Among PlantationDarkies

Roanoke, Va., July 20 (AP).—George Gershwin, composer of "Rhapsody in Blue," was on his way back to New York today after a month spent in South Carolina searching for, in such settings as churches and camp meetings of plantation darkies, a background of Negro melody and inspiration on which to base his composition for the presentation of Du Bose Heyward's "Porgy" as an opera.

For more than a month he has been vacationing at Folly Beach, about 15 miles south of Charlestown, S. C., and has worked out a partial score for the first scene of the opera. During this time he attended many Negro church meetings, going to "some of the most out of the way places you've ever seen," in order to learn the beat and syncopation the Southern Negros put into their spirituals and folk songs.

Potato Chips Rise to High Social Position

Some Excellent Pretzels Are Worthy to Serve With Best Beer.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

POETS sing the praises of flowers in spring, moonlit nights. Musicians immortalize the rustling of leaves in the wind, the wild surf beating against rocky coasts. Artists capture gypsy colors in autumnal landscapes, or pink primroses against green hedges. But the housewife with the fervor of poet, musician, or painter can sound the praises of mere potatoes if they're prepared par excellence!

Just how far potatoes can rise from their humble home in the ground has been successfully demonstrated by a Washington woman who makes potato chips like no others in the world. Just what she does to them is her secret but when she's finished they are delicacies fit for a banquet table.

They're often seen at banquets, too. One may buy them from two shops, on the Baltimore-Washington boulevard and another on Park road.

Besides the potato chips, there are pretzels, crisp, tasty, and worthy running mates to beer.

Keep these chips and pretzels in mind for your next Dutch supper.

Fig Tree Substitute.

There are no real Southern fig trees around here. No wide green leaves that throw heavy shade on the ground, or ripe figs bursting open and oozing sugared juice for the hordes of June bugs that cluster over them.

But there fig preserves "what are" fig preserves! These aren't mashed up figs, each fig is solid unto itself. They're a tempting sight; it takes patience not to open the jars and sample them then and there.

Mango Ice Ceram.

Those who have visited the Philippine Islands will be glad to know one of the cooling delicacies which delighted them there is available in Washington. It's mango ice cream.

Heretofore, mangoes have been picked before they were fully ripe and consequently have lacked the luscious flavor of the mature fruit. A new shipping process has been developed and thanks to this the mango can be picked fully ripe and shipped to this country with all its ripe richness.

A local ice cream company has obtained a shipment of tasty Philippine mangoes and is using them in ice cream. Here is an opportunity to surprise the family with a new dessert or delight guests with "something different."

Grass Coasters.

Several weeks ago a shopper called and asked where she could find some grass coasters. Up until then there had been none in local shops which answered her description. But now there are.

A large department store has a gift department that manages to keep up with all the unusual things that appear on the market. Here the coasters appeared. Each one is woven of natural colored grass touched here and there with colored strands. About two or three inches in height, they fit over the bottoms of glasses and enable one to hold them in a firm and comfortable grip. When they are placed on the chair arm or table, there's no danger of leaving rings.

* * * *

Entertaining Siphon.

In the same department is a most amusing siphon. Just as one makes up her mind there isn't and couldn't be anything new in siphons, up pops this one. Fitted over a bottle of soda water or any effervescent beverage it will perform its job ably, and amusingly, too.

A long glass tube is surmounted with a minstrel's head. A black face brightened with red lips and splotched with white eyes, peeps out from under a tall silk hat. The head is set on a cork that fits tightly into slim-necked bottles.

Just shake it up and let it go—and the beverage seeps up into the tube and comes tumbling out of the minstrel's wide-open mouth.

Nutted Marshmallows.

Marshmallows may be purchased at almost any grocery or drug store and for very little, too. Take 1½ pounds of them (about 120), 3 cups of nut meats, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 cups light brown sugar, 2-3 of a cup of water and prepare some marvelous nut-coated marshmallows.

Walnuts, pecans, almonds or a mixture of these may be used. Chop the nuts very fine, shake through a sieve so the pieces will be the same size. Mix the salt with the nuts. Boil the sugar and water without stirring until the syrup reaches a temperature of 226 degrees Fahr. or until it threads from the spoon. Remove from the flame, and set in a larger pan of hot water. Brush the loose powder from the marshmallows, and drop one by one into the hot syrup. Stir with forks until coated with syrup, lift out, drain, roll in the chopped nuts, and place on waxed paper to dry. If the syrup becomes too thick reheat, but do not allow it to come to a boil.

Frozen Corn Salad Receives First Prize in Recipe Contest

Mrs. Margaret Belair, of Washington, Wins First Award; Other Food Ideas Pour in From Housewives From Texas to New Jersey.

By Susan Mills.

HOUSEWIVES all the way from Texas to New Jersey responded to the request for corn recipes. One of America's most characteristic dishes has been truly glorified by America's cooks.

For their originality and simplicity, prizes were awarded to three of the contributions. There were many excellent recipes, but space does not permit the printing of more of these.

For a frozen corn salad, first prize, $3, was awarded Mrs. Margaret Belair, 1528 Connecticut avenue; second prize, $2, goes to Miss Lujean Cornall, Box 506, Manassas, Va. Her recipe is for corn, Javanese style. "Corn rarebit," brought third prize, $1, for Miss Alice V. Whitfield, 50 Fairmont avenue, Chatham, N. J.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

WHEN the long summer afternoon palls for the three-to-six-year-olds, take a few minutes from household tasks and play "May I?" with them.

The children line up, with the leader facing them, 15 or 20 feet away.

"Junior, you may take three medium-sized steps," says the leader, but before doing so, Junior must ask, "May I?"

"Sally, you may take two giant steps, and, Jane, you may take seven tiny steps." Each player must ask, "May I?" and, failing to do so, is penalized by having to return to the base line. The child who reaches the leader first is the winner, and the leader the next time.

Simple as it sounds, children have difficulty in remembering to ask the required permission and constant penalties make the game interesting. And the child who plays this game never, in later life, commits the grammatical offense of saying "Can I?" when he means "May I?"

(Tuesday: Traveling With a Baby).

What simple ways have you found of entertaining small children? Your suggestions will be welcomed by other mothers. Write Alice Fox Pitts in care of The Washington Post. Your name will be used or omitted as you wish.

Many Come to See Old Indian Paintings

Waukon Junction, Iowa (U.P.).—The famed Indian paintings on "Paint Rock" near here continue to attract curious visitors and Indians themselves every year, according to John Atal, owner of the farm about the rock.

The paintings, described by La Salle and Marquette in their explorations along the Mississippi, originally represented pictures of strange monsters, somewhat similar to the dragons of fairy stories. No satisfactory solution of their meaning or of the manner in which they were put on the high bluff ever has been advanced.

Weather partially has destroyed the relief of the figures, but traces of the outlines still are visible. A red mineral paint was used by the primitive artists, who splashed the grotesque figures on the rock; the paint still is in a remarkable state of preservation.

One Indian legend says the paintings were made "with the blood of a dragon." Atal said that Indians come every year to crawl along the precarious ledge under the paintings.

What Today Means

"Cancer."

If July 21 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 12 noon, from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 1 to 3 p. m. and from 6 to 8 p. m.

Businesses catering to the needs and cravings of the general public are about the only ones that will find it profitable to stay open this Saturday. Money may be spent freely for pleasure or diversified forms of entertainment. If invited out, be careful about making any rash promise to take care of or entertain someone you have not previously met, for you might find yourself with a decided bore or wallflower on your hands. You may meet a very egotistical type of individual, one who tries to impress every one with his social position and familiarity with the great and near great. It might be tactful to good naturedly swallow what they have to say and appear duly impressed, for it will accomplish no good to get into an argument with them. If being entertained by friends, be careful that in a hilarious moment you are not guilty of committing a breach of etiquette, which might result in embarrassment. Sentimental couples should avoid giving vent to their feelings in public places, as they place themselves in a position of being justifiably criticized for lacking proper breeding.

If a woman and July 21 is your birthday, you are naturally a born leader, and should be able to exert a tremendous influence over every one you come into contact with in either a social or business way. Your sentimental nature makes married life the logical one for you. You will probably find far more satisfaction managing a home than an office or business, and certainly may get greater happiness out of it. There is every reason to believe that financial matters will terminate satisfactorily for you, and apparently insurmountable obstacles will be overcome.

Children born on July 21, as they grow up, usually display a remarkable degree of candor in their social intercourse with others. They are, as a rule, truthful and dependable. They generally are very popular, as they make friends readily.

If a man and July 21 is your natal day, you are an executive type of individual, capable of handling subordinates. This ability to direct other people can be demonstrated not only in the industrial world, but in the directing of stage productions, regulating the affairs of a law office, or the editorial room of a newspaper. Your capacity for work is bound to bring satisfactory financial reward.

Ice Box Cakes Handled Easily By Refrigerator

Here's How to Start and the Freezing Will Do the Rest.

COOKIES blended lusciously with custard or cream, nuts and fruit into those glorious concoctions known as refrigerator cakes and pies—that's the desert that makes Comedian Fred Allen break into smiles on his own account.

Some of them (these refrigerator cakes) are very easily made. Take the chocolate-nut roll in the picture, for example. Unless you've actually made this ornamental dessert yourself, you'll find it hard to believe that just chocolate snaps, whipped cream and nuts form the basic ingredients. The refrigerator does the rest. Here's how:

Chocolate-Nut Roll.

First, set out 18 chocolate wafers (about 2½ inches in diameter). Then whip 2-3 cup heavy cream, spread this between the wafers, and stand them on edge, to make a roll. Wrap this in waxed paper, and set in refrigerator about three hours. When ready to serve, whip another 1-3 cup cream, sweeten it with 1 tablespoon confectioner's sugar, add ½ teaspoon vanilla, and spread this over the outside of the roll.

Sprinkle ½ cup chopped pecans or walnuts over the top of the roll and cut it (on the bias) in ½-inch slices. Note: If you like things good and sweet, sweeten the whipped cream used between the wafers. One-half cup chopped, moist coconut is good in it, too. In this case, omit the nuts and sprinkle the top of the roll with coconut, too. If you like spearmint flavor, you can get another good effect by omitting nuts and coconut, and flavoring the 2-3 cup cream with ¼ teaspoon mint extract.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Serum Reactions.

Many of our life-saving antitoxins, such as tetanus, diphtheria, &c., are obtained by immunizing horses with the toxin formed by the specific disease producing bacteria. The horse proceeds promptly to manufacture antibodies or neutralizing substances against the toxin. With repeated injections of the toxin, antibodies appear in the blood of the horse in high concentration. A very small amount of serum from a horse that has been immunized against the toxin of the diphtheria bacillus may contain enough antitoxin to neutralize the poison produced by diphtheria in a human being.

It is not possible to obtain antitoxin chemically pure. Certain other substances (proteins) that are found in the serum of the horse accompany the antitoxin; in fact, these other substances may act as solvents or carriers of the antitoxin. These serum proteins possess the property of disturbing the nervous system of human beings, and when a reaction occurs following the injection of antitoxin it is known as a serum reaction. Within a few days to two weeks following a first injection of a serum not derived from human blood the patient may develop a slight fever, a skin eruption characterized by rash or wheals, pains in the joints and swelling.

Some persons are hypersensitive, especially those who have had symptoms of hay fever or asthma. In such individuals even the injection of a minute quantity of horse serum may bring on a severe constitutional disturbance.

Should indications arise for the use of antitoxin or serum of any sort, patients should give the attending physician all known facts relative to the previous use of antitoxin or serum. Also any information that may identify the patient with previous attacks of hay fever or asthma. In an emergency the physician must not delay, but if there is time the patient should be tested by the injection of a small quantity of horse serum into the skin. If a wheal is raised or a reddened area results, it is clear that the patient is sensitive to the serum.

In emergency calling for the use of antitoxins the physician will proceed with caution in the presence of a history of previous serum sickneess or of known sensitiveness to horse serum. It sometimes means the choosing of the lesser of two evils. In certain instances it is imperative that serum be used. With a sensitive individual the physician will rely upon a desenesitizing procedure and upon adrenalin and other aids in combating the reaction.

ESCAPE from the SOVIETS

By TATIANA TCHERNAVIN

Tatiana Tchernavin and her husband, Russian intellectuals, were imprisoned by the Soviets on falsified charges, leaving their small son to fend for himself. Past installments have revealed stories of the hideous life behind prison walls, and details of this tragedy continue in today's chapter.

OUR only joy in prison were the pigeons. In the spring there were many of them. With a soft rustle of wings they flew over the stone walls of the prison, alighting on the dirty melting snow of the yard, where everyone during the walk tried to leave for them some bread crumbs or lumps of porridge. Cooing, they walked about on the roof, and we heard their feet pattering on the iron window-sills of the prison windows.

On Easter Day someone managed to leave in the corner of the yard an egg with "Christ is Risen" written on it; the egg was painted, in prison fashion, with indelible pencil and colored threads, probably pulled out of a dress. An Easter egg would not have been allowed in a parcel from home. Pigeons crowded round it and pecked at it busily, scattering bits of colored shell. This is how people in Russia greet their dead on Easter Day—by leaving colored eggs on the graves for birds to peck at.

Torrential Rains.

On Easter Monday there was torrential rain and wild wind. Windows in the OGPU agents' flats, above the common cells, flew open and bits of paper fluttered about. The following morning we found in the yard a blue flower made of fine shavings—a Soviet invention, since paper and rags are much too dear. It looked lovely, but no one dared to take it; we were not allowed to pick up even pigeons' feathers.

In a semibasement window that we had to pass on the way to the yard lay some freshly-sawn logs that had a delicious smell of the forest. It gave one the illusion of being really in the open, but the rude shout, "Go on, what are you stopping for!" brought one back to the sour stench of the prison.

These were chance incidents, but the pigeons came continually, pecked the bread crumbs on the window-sill, and peeped into the cell, stretching their necks and holding their heads on one side as though surprised at what they saw.

Pigeons Fed Secretly.

Feeding the pigeons was strictly forbidden; both the wardresses inside the prison and the warders outside, who could see on whose windows the pigeons settled, persecuted us for it. But it was very hard to part with our only visitors!

Not to be caught at these forbidden trysts, I fed my pigeons at a quiet secret hour. When lights were put out for the night I stealthily got up from my bed, stole up to the window and, opening the ventilation pane, strewed bread crumbs on the window-sill. At daybreak when, after a disturbed night, everyone dozed off at last—the wardresses, the sentry in the yard, and even the most nervous and restless of the prisoners, pigeons cheerfully flew to my window. They pecked greedily, fighting and pushing each other, cooing contentedly when there was enough and peeping at the window with a request for more.

I listened to them through my sleep, sorry that the hour for getting up was drawing near and another senseless day would soon begin. The sound of their cooing that came into the cell, together with a whiff of fresh morning air not poisoned as yet by the kitchen fumes made one think of freedom.

Birds Destroyed.

"Dear, friendly birds, it's time you flew away! You little care that the sentry is waking up, that the wardress begins her walk down the corridors, but I'll get into trouble."

I was sorry to drive them away and hear no more of their cooing. I never fed them in the daytime, though they came to the window and scolded me in angry, loud voices.

But soon the OGPU destroyed our harmless, charming friends. Orders were issued that they were all to be caught and killed. A trap was put in the yard and the tame, friendly birds were almost all caught within a few days.

Perishing From Heat.

A pigeon and two doves still came to my window, but I did not feed them any more in spite of all their grumbling and complaints. I wanted them to lose the habit of coming and fly away to safety. But no! Soon I found the pigeon lying dead in the trap; the doves disappeared. The courtyard grew still and empty; only the prisoners dejectedly paced to and fro on the black asphalt.

Summer passed: June, July. We were perishing with the heat and the stuffiness. The thick stone walls exuded moisture that had been accumulating for years and years. The cells were hot and damp, like a bad cellar. Though we had no exercise and scarcely moved at all, we were bathed in perspiration day and night. All were getting thinner and paler than in winter, while the wardresses looked jolly and sunburnt.

It was nearly five months since my arrest; four months since the accusation was shown to me, and almost ten since my husband was taken. I knew nothing of what was happening outside the prison, and could not understand when our "case" would end.

Women Waited Sentence.

"You must wait," the old wardresses said. They had grown used to me and were sympathetic. "It's always like that with us: If they don't let you out at the end of two months, you must wait five. And it's a good sign that they don't call you up to be questioned."

Almost all the women in solitary confinement had been sentenced to five or ten years of penal camps. They were waiting for the sentence to be confirmed by the Moscow OGPU, which settled their fate without having ever heard their own evidence. A dull indifference descended upon them during those last days before exile into the cold and hnger of the penal camps. The woman whose cell I shared on my first night in prison had been sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to ten years penal servitude at Solvki. For me, too, the days dragged on dully and aimlessly.

Suddenly, I was called before the examining officer. That meant the end. What was it?

Like Bad Dream.

It is impossible to describe what I felt as I went to hear my verdict. A blind fury of indignation was welling up within me. To think that I should have to submit in silence to an absurd sentence passed on me and my husband and my child by the dullards of the OGPU!

It all seemed like a bad dream: the examining officer's study, the branch outside his window, though this time its leaves were dusty and withered. The same horrid, hysterical man.

"Take a seat."

He looked me up and down.

"You are looking very well."

"And so are you."

"Yes, you know I have been away on leave. I have kept you waiting. Were you bored?"

"It's not particularly cheerful here."

A wry smile.

Wreckers Not Wanted.

"Quite so, quite so." He opened his cigarette case: "And your dear husband has been sent to penal servitude. Yes! We don't want wreckers. Certainly not!" he shouted.

So that was the end. They have sent him away.

"Where to?" I asked, speaking with difficulty.

"I don't know. To the north, I believe, to the penal camps. Let him knock about for two or three years there and learn to work, instead of wrecking. It will do him good."

"When was he sent?" I asked calmly, though I felt sick and dizzy.

"I don't know. How should I know? It was not my case," he said carelessly, watching me with interest. "Well, what about you? Where shall we send you? We thought of Solovki. What do you say to that?"

He kept his eye on me, waiting to see the effect. I said nothing.

Son Watched.

"Yes, yes. We thought of Solovki. It's a fine place. The sea, forest all round."

He went on chattering. I did not hear and could not force myself to listen or to think of my own fate. They have sent my husband away. He doesn't tell me where nor when. I haven't been allowed to see him, they didn't let us say good-by.

"We thought of Solovki, but we took pity on you. You have a son, you know. We've been keeping an eye on him. He is not a bad boy, but we don't want homeless children. So you'll have to work for the present, yes to work."

"Where?"

"How do you mean, where? At your old job. You are of no interest to us now. What did you think? They showed you some sort of charge against you, didn't they? That's nonsense! We just write out those charges when necessary. You can forget about that.

Released at Last.

"I repeat, we are no longer interested in you and you are no use to us. It's true. I was very much annoyed with you and seriously wanted to send you to Solovki. I have no patience with the way one has to wring out every word from you. It's beyond everything! However, we've decided to let you off and you may go. But I don't advise you to return to us, I certainly don't. Next time we should have a different sort of talk. I don't believe you understand what I am saying—I tell you, we are letting you go. I am just going to sign the order. It has to go to the office, and tonight, or tomorrow morning, as soon as the formalities are finished, you may go home! I have kept you here a bit too long, but never mind, you'll have plenty of time to get over it. Take care you don't fall into our hands again! We won't stand on ceremony with you then."

"We Are Still In '34 Race" —Johnson

Tribe Will Make Critics Forget Their Raps, He Declares.

Sure, He Has Committed Mistakes, but Who Hasn't, He Adds.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 20 (AP).—Walter Johnson says his Cleveland Indians are going to make him look like a bang-up manager before the season is over.

That was the "Big Train's" reply today to criticism heaped on him by fans and sports writers after poor pitching lost Monday's game to the New York Yankees.

"You know and I know," said Johnson, "that it's the players that make the manager and not the other way around. This ball club is going to make me look very good before long, and make the fans forget all this uproar.

Not Out of Race.

"It's a real ball club coming along and it's going to be a real club for a long time. We're going to win a lot of games, and we're not out of the pennant race yet."

Walter admitted he had been disturbed by the uproar, but he had two reasons to be happy today. For one thing, the Indians haven't dropped a game since Monday, and yesterday they scored five runs in the ninth to win one that presumably had been lost. And then they went into third place today.

For another, Alva Bradley, president of the Indians, announced last night that Johnson had been signed for another year as manager to show the owners' faith in him. Bradley added today:

"We think if ever a manager were deserving of praise, it is Walter Johnson. We are satisfied with the progress he has made with the club and in the development of young players."

Part of the Game.

Johnson said he realizes a manager's life is no bed of roses, and that the criticism is "part of the game."

"Mistakes?" he said. "Maybe I've made them, but who hasn't? I've only got one guess out there. The newspaper boys and the fans get the second guess. A lot of things happen that make me look bad, sure, but you have to expect it from a young club like we have."

Anent Monday's game, he said: "They yell I should have put Harder in to pitch. Well, Harder had only one day rest and he'd had a hard ball game. Lloyd Brown has gone in before and finished up games in good shape for me. He went in and couldn't get the ball over the plate, but he's not that kind of a pitcher. But that's guessing after the thing is done."

Cards Top Braves, 5-1; Carleton Is Effective

Boston, July 20 (AP).—A home run by Wally Berger saved the Boston Braves from a whitewash at the hands of the St. Louis Cardinals today as they dropped their second game of the current series, 5 to 1.

Tex Carleton pitched a perfect game for the visitors until the seventh, allowing not a single man to reach first base. Berger put a finish to Carleton's no-hit, no-run hopes in this inning when he hit the homer, his twenty-first of the season.

The Cards started scoring after two were out in the first inning when Rothrock reached first on an error by Catcher Spohrer after striking out. Singles by Medwick, Collins and Orsatti sent across two runs in this frame.

Kennedy Draws Ring Suspension

Connecticut Body Acts Following Knockout.

Waterbury, Conn., July 20 (U.P.).—State Athletic Boxing Commissioner Joseph H. Lawlor suspended Les Kennedy, Alexandria, Va., heavyweight, knocked out in the second round here last night by Eddie Hogan, Waterbury, and says he will ask all member States of the National Boxing Association to take similar action.

Charging Kennedy with "indifferent fighting," the commissioner said, "it's a shame to have a boxer of Kennedy's type spoil the efforts of Promoter Mulligan to give Waterbury good boxing cards."

Helped by Rain, Giants Trim Reds, 11-5

Johnson Falters After Delay of Hour, Champ Have 7-Run Rally.

NEW YORK, July 20 (AP).—The weather came to the rescue of the Giants today when they seemed about to suffer the indignity of a drubbing from the Reds, and when they finished they had another victory, 11 to 5, and their lead over the second-place Cubs was increased to 3½ games.

The league leaders were trailing 4-0 when a storm struck and delayed the game an hour. During the wait Si Johnson, the Reds' sturdy pitcher, who had given only one hit in three innings, cooled off. When he resumed his duties, the Giants smacked him off the hill to score seven runs in the fourth and put the game on ice.

Ott Hits 23rd Homer.

Mel Ott rapped his twenty-third home run of the year in the fifth to equal last year's total for the full season and to drive in his ninety-eighth run of the year.

Manager Bill Terry started the Giants' rally in the fourth with a single. Ott, Frank O'Doul, Travis Jackson and Gus Mancuso followed with base hits that counted three runs. Johnson went out after walking Pinch Hitter George Grantham to fill the bases and Joe Moore met Kolp with a triple that cleared the corners. He scored the seventh run on Hughey Critz's single.

Netmen Face Australians Today

Williams Is Confident Americans Will Win, 3 Matches to 2.

Crawford Will Oppose Shields and McGrath to Battle Wood.

By Gale Talbot.

WIMBLEDON, England, July 20 (AP).—After Uncle Sam's four Davis Cup players held a final rehearsal today on Wimbledon's historic center court, where they will open up tomorrow against Australia for the right to challenge the cup-holding English team, Capt. R. Norris (Dick) Williams, the American squad leader, spoke confidently and enthusiastically of their prospects.

It was Williams' opinion that Frank X. Shields and Sidney B. Wood, jr., the singles players, and George M. Lott, jr., and Lester R. Stoefen, the doubles team, would squeeze through, three matches to two.

Easy Singles Victory.

Williams anticipates an easy victory for Lott and Stoefen over the Australian combination of Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist, and looks for singles victories over Vivian McGrath by Wood and Shields.

"If either Shields or Wood beats Crawford, that would be pure velvet," Williams said.

The interzone series opens with Shields pitted against Crawford in a match between the top-ranking players of their respective countries, and Wood against the youthful McGrath, who employs a two-handed grip for backhand shots.

Are in Fine Fettle.

During their final workout, Shields and Wood appeared in particularly fine fettle as they played just enough to keep their muscles loose. Lott and Stoefen, who dropped a doubles decision to their compatriots yesterday, worked out more strenuously and left no doubt as to their condition. They will meet Crawford and Quist on Monday.

The consensus here runs along the same line as Williams' opinion, making the Americans a well-defined favorite to eliminate Australia. The Aussies advanced to the penultimate round after a non-too-impressive conquest of the Czechslovakian team. The Anzacs won, three matches to two, with both Crawford and McGrath losing to Roderich Menzel.

The Americans rule as favorites because of the fine showing all four made in the all-England championships and the sustained excellence of their performances in training.

Tribe Tops Red Sox To Gain 3d Place

Harder to Rescue as Mates Win Fourth in Row, 5-3.

Cleveland, July 20 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians stretched their winning streak to four games today and climbed into third place in the league's standings by defeating the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 3.

Monte Pearson was credited with the Tribe's victory, but had to be rescued by Mel Harder, ace right-hander, in the eighth inning, after he developed a touch of wildness.

All of the Sox runs were scored in the sixth, when Pearson filled the bases with walks and then yielded singles to Lary and Porter.

The Tribe got away to a 4-run lead in the second inning on four hits off Walberg and an error by Morgan. Their final counter came in the fourth, off Welch.

Striking Caddies Jeer At Somerset Golfers

Somerset, Pa., July 20 (Spl.).—Playing golf at the Somerset Country Club is not fun for those who take their game seriously. In fact, poor shots and lost balls threaten to break up the game entirely.

The reason was a caddies' strike, the 30 youthful club-carriers storming over the course with cat-calls and jeers as the players teed off. They are demanding 35 cents per nine holes for carrying bags. The rate for the last two seasons has been 25 cents.

Speedy Dixon Fights Cross Tonight

32 Rounds of Boxing Are Listed on All-Colored Card at Stadium.

THE Capital's outdoor colored boxing season will be launched tonight amid big league surroundings at Griffith Stadium, with Tommy Gross, Philadelphia knockerout, and Speedy Dixon, Washington Will o' the Wisp, playing the principal ten-round roles.

As an amateur, Cross won the featherweight championship of Philadelphia. Since joining the moneyed ranks, he has compiled a remarkable record in 90 fights, scoring 52 knockouts, winning 36 decisions and dropping only 4 contests.

Dixon is a first cousin of George Dixon, the "Little Chocolate" who ruled the bantamweight roost in the Gay Nineties, and later advanced to the featherweight division. Tonight's match will offer Dixon his first opportunity of achieving National recognition.

A semifinal of show-stealing potentialities will be offered in an eight-rounder between Baby Kid Chocolate, of Atlantic City, and Gerald Reeder, of Philadelphia. A crafty ringster, Baby Kid Chocolate is declared by many as good a fighter as his namesake at his best. Reeder is a rugged, rough and ready featherweight from Philadelphia, who figures to make Chocolate unwrap all his tricks.

A battle royal, always a favorite with the Washington fight public, will conclude the festivities after the main bout.

In all, 32 rounds will be offered.

Preliminaries—Joe Rucker, Wilmington, vs. Sammy Williams, Jersey City, welterweights, 6 rounds. Ted King, Camden, N. J., vs. Tommy Miller, Baltimore, lightweights, 6 rounds. Jimmy Johnson, Baltimore vs. Buster Stewart, Cumberland, lightweights, 4 rounds. Battle royal will follow the main event.

Incadescent Returns $26.40 in Detroit Race

Detroit, July 20 (AP).—The long-shot players had to wait until the fifth race on today's Michigan State Fair Grounds card for their reward, Incadescent, paying $26.40 for a $2 ticket, beating Ladino by 1½ lengths over the 6-furlong course. Tractable was third.

Today's card was without particular feature, all the races carrying $800 purses. Blackstrap, a heavily played favorite, was close to Incadescent in the early part of the fifth race, but could not withstand the final rush.

Don George Fined $10.

Andover, Mass., July 20 (U.P.).—Ed Don George, former University of Michigan football star and claimant of the world heavyweight wrestling championship, was fined $10 today on a speeding charge.

Lovelock Runs Bonthron in Mile Today

Race Features Meet of U. S. Star Team Against Oxford-Cambridge.

WHITE CITY, England, July 20 (AP).—A band of American college athletes, hoping to stem the tide of sports supremacy that has swept toward England in recent weeks, completed training today preparatory to an engagement with the combined track and field forces of Oxford and Cambridge universities tomorrow in the White City Stadium.

The promise of another breath-taking duel between Bill Bonthron, Princeton's great stretch-drive miler, and Jack Lovelock, John Bull's fleet miler, excited most interest. Because they are running on a slower track than at Princeton last summer, when Lovelock covered the mile in 4:07.6, it was consider doubtful they would equal that record-smashing pace, but the British record of 4:12, set by Lovelock in 1932, appeared in danger.

Track of Yielding Clay.

The track is a combination of sand and clay, reddish colored and far more yielding than the cinder creation at Princeton. Lovelock is accustomed to this footing, while Bonthron has had little time to acquaint himself with it.

British track enthusiasts are anxious to see Bonthron, whose fame in winning three of five races at a mile and 1,500 meters against Glenn Cunningham, the galloping Kansan, preceded him here. Lovelock, since a knee operation last year, has not been capable of sustained training, nor has he shown his old speed, but word has been whispered around that he has just reached his top form and is primed for a great race. Whether that is true or not, the rumor will help draw a big crowd.

Roanoke Meet Today Draws Swim Stars

Roanoke, Va., July 20 (AP).—Swimmers from Richmond, Newport News, Lynchburg and Camp, Va., and Bluefield, W. Va., were entered along with several Roanokers in the fourth annual Lakeside swimming meet which starts tomorrow.

From Camp came the entries of Lewis Onesty, coach of Episcopal High School; J. Warren Montague, who captained the University of Virginia team last season, and Billy Wiltshire. Ben Garrett and Baxter Valentine were entered from Richmond and Billy McClintick and Macon Patterson from Timberlake, near Lynchburg.

Chisox Down Yanks, 7-6, In 13th

3 New York Homers, Including Gehrig's 25th, Are Futile.

Appling's Single Sends Winning Run Over; Ruffing Loser.

CHICAGO, July 20 (AP).—The White Sox' base hits proved more effective than the Yankees' home runs today, but it took 13 innings to prove it. Getting only one extra base blow in their 14 hits, while the Yanks got all their runs through circuit swats, Chicago won the overtime battle, 7 to 6.

The defeat of the Yanks evened the series and left New York two and one-half game behind the league-leading Detroit Tigers.

The Yanks built up a good lead when Lou Gehrig hit his twenty-fifth homer with two on in the first and Frank Crosetti hit for the circuit in the fourth, but Johnny Broaca weakened after pitching two-hit ball for five innings and Chicago tied the score in the seventh and went ahead in the eighth. Earl Combs' homer tied it up again in the ninth.

Vote Second In Front of Mumsie

Morning Mail Beats Out Enthusiasm in Last Lunge by Neck.

ROCKINGHAM PARK, Salem, N. H., July 20 (AP).—J. D. Mikel's Gaillardia, 6-year-old gelded son of Blink II, easily defeated a field of seven other starters in the fourth event, a $1,000 claiming affair at Rockingham Park today. Mrs. M. J. White's Vote, which has been out of the money only once in his last eight races, was second, a length and a half back, and three lengths in front of Mrs. M. Koerner's Mumsie.

Gaillardia broke on top and maintained a slight lead throughout, with Vote and Mumsie alternating in second position during the mile and an eighth journey, with the former getting up to take the place honors in the last furlong. Gaillardia, the favorite, returned his backers $7.70 for a $2 ticket and covered the distance in 1:52 flat over a fast track.

Morning Mail Victor.

In the third event, a $1,200 allowance affair for 2-year-olds, A. A. Baroni's Morning Mail got up in the last strides to win by a neck from Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Enthusiasm. Grandpa's Boy was third.

Morning Mail paid $6.20 to win and negotiated the 5½ furlongs in 1:06 flat.

WATERSET, permitted to settle into her best stride and not hurried during the opening quarter-mile, began moving up leaving the back stretch, came to the outside of the leaders in the stretch, closed with a rush, and was going away at the end. STRETCH CALL moved up fast approaching the stretch, wore down THE HEATHEN, showed in front briefly, but was unable to keep pace when challenged. THE HEATHEN went to the front nearing the far turn, but was unable to maintain his advantage through the stretch when placed under punishment. ORAL had good speed, but faltered in the last three furlongs. ERVAST was never a factor. LIBERTY OAK tired.

SECOND RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:13½. Winner, Mrs. R. L. Rogers' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERRY CHATTER, $13.60, $7.50, $4.80; WILROB, $9.20, $6.00; INFORMAL, $4.70.

MERRY CHATTER, outrun until the closing quarter-mile, came to the outside straightening out in the stretch and, closing with a rush, wore down WILROB inside the last few yards and was going away at the end. WILROB, well up all the way, shook off MACADAM, appeared all over the winner a sixteenth out, but was unable to keep pace when challenged. INFORMAL went well placed throughout and continued gamely in the final drive. MACADAM had good speed all the way, but weakened in the last three-sixteenths. HAPPY SCOT was never a serious factor. GAY TIME went well for the opening three furlongs.

THIRD RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Methuen Purse. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:41½. Off at 3:47. Winner, A. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORNING MAIL, $6.20, $4.20, $3.00; ENTHUSIASM, $7.30, $3.00; GRANDPA'S BOY, $7.40.

MORNING MAIL was reserved in pursuit of the early pace, responded gamely to punishment straightening out in the stretch and, closing gamely, wore down ENTHUSIASM in the concluding strides. ENTHUSIASM had speed from the start, was rated along in front under slight restraint, and held on gamely in the final test. GRANDPA'S BOY forced the pace throughout and held on stubbornly in the stretch run. TOOLBOX, slow to begin, moved up fast on the outside in the opening three-sixteenths and, despite hard urging, was unable to reach the leaders. CANDY PRINCE went well all the way. STAR CHASE, well placed early, was unable to keep up and dropped back in the last quarter-mile. The others were never prominent.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAILLARDIA, $7.70, $4.20, $2.90; VOTE, $4.60, $3 00; MUMSIE $2.60.

GAILLARDIA went to the front in the run to the first turn, was steadied along in advance of his field all the way, and held VOTE safe at the end. The latter, unruly at the post, outbroke, his field, raced reserved early, made a determined effort to reach the leader, but was not good enough. MUMSIE, forwardly placed from the start, was unable to keep pace with the leaders through the closing quarter-mile. HONEY SWEET went well and had no excuses. ARROWSWIFT, away poorly, was rushed to his field, but was never able to reach the leaders. BARCELONA PETE stumbled and almost unseated his rider at the first turn.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:52. Off at 4:54½. Winner, Mrs. Elizabeth Chesterfield's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UKRAINE, $37.20, $13.80, $6.70; ROCK POINT, $3.60, $2.80; ALLENFERN, $4.80.

UKRAINE moved up fast after straightening out on the back stretch, drew clear leaving the back stretch and, hard ridden at the end, outlasted ROCK POINT. The latter reserved while racing well responded gamely to punishment and was catching the winner at every stride at the end. ALLENFERN came with good energy in the stretch run. PRINCE TOKALON, a trailer early, made up some ground. FOREWARNED opened up a long lead in the first quarter-mile, but weakened after going five furlongs. PRINCE ABBOT was never able to reach a prominent position.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:25½. Off at 5:31½. Winner, Mrs. M. J. White's b. g. GRAND ACRE, a forward factor from the start, took command at the first turn, was rated along in front, lost command to JIM ORMONT, but came again and held QUICK STEP safe at the end. JIM ORMONT, sustained pursuit at the pace, saved ground in the stretch and closed with good energy. DANCING MACK came stoutly through the closing quarter-mile. INFILEE closed going gamely. JIM ORMONT had a lot taken out of him in getting to the front and faltered in the closing furlong. IN INDIA had good speed for the first six furlongs. SERENABIT tired after displaying a flash of early speed.

FRIEND WHITEY, nearest in pursuit of the early pace, took command approaching the stretch and drew out steadily at the closing furlong. WISE COUNT drew his way into a good lead in hold on gamely at the finish, but was unable to keep pace with the winner when challenged. MORALIST, restrained early, was going stoutly at the end. MILD made up some ground, but was unable to enter into serious contention. MARGE was outrun. BLACK DREAMS had brief early speed.

Stocks Retreat 2.2 Points in Selling Wave

Cause of Drop Unexplained; Trading Volume Rises to 1,237,315 Shares.

New York, July 20 (AP).—A wave of selling broke a stalemate in the stock market today and expanded the volume of trading to above a million shares for the first time since June 8.

Except for waning inflation psychology and technical factors, brokers could find no satisfactory explanation for the weakness of speculative markets.

Sales Volume Jumps.

The day's stock transfers totaled 1,237,315 shares, compared with a daily average recently of 500,000 to 600,000.

Rail shares on the average sold at a new low level for the year. Pressure also was relatively heavy on metals and other groups that had benefited from inflationary sentiment, indicating growing doubt in speculative quarters over the prospect of near-future monetary expansion of the drastic sort talked of from time to time.

Among stocks suffering losses of 2 to 4 points were American Can, Santa Fe, Atlas Powder, Bethlehem Steel, Chesapeake Corporation, Coca Cola, Corn Products, Dome Mines, American Smelting, U. S. Smelting, Hercules Powder, Illinois Central, New Haven, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber and Union Bag and Paper.

Professional Trading Active.

Professional activity, which had been at an extremely low ebb for some time, was reported to have increased markedly on the decline, traders interpreting the emergence of the market from its narrow rut bearishly.

While Wall street felt relieved over the ending of the San Francisco general strike, that had been expected and did not apparently influence the market. Moderation of inflation ideas seemed to be based mainly on reports of impending large-scale Treasury refunding operations and belief that inflationists could look for little support in Administration quarters while they were being carried out.

Rail shares were pressed for sale in advance of publication of June operating revenue results. The weekly carloading report showed a gain of 82,971 cars to 602,778 on a rebound from the decline in the preceding week, which included the July 4 holiday. The total was 50,883 cars under a year ago.

Trade reviews retained a cheerful tone, especially in reports on retail trade.

London—A quietly steady tone prevailed on the stock exchange today. A fair business was transacted in gold mining shares. Industrials and Argentine rails at hardening just as rapidly as possible. At the time this was considered, and quite properly, the most fundamental international financial problem confronting the world. Until it was solved, reparations and international loans necessarily must remain in a state of flux. Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Visit of Bank of England Governor Recalls the Day When Conferences Between Him and Reserve Officials Were Major News.

By Ralph West Robey.

Three or four years ago it would have been considered a financial development of first rank importance for Mr. George Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and Mr. Montague Norman, governor of the Bank of England, to cross the ocean together as they now are doing. And there would have been good reason for holding such an opinion. Because in those days when Mr. Norman visited the United States it meant business. At present it means nothing.

Back of this change has been an interesting bit of financial history. It is a bit of history, too, that does not reflect much credit upon the United States, or more properly upon our central bankers. For almost without exception they were off second best in all such international conferences. This was not because our bankers were poorer negotiators than the other central bankers, or because they did not understand the issues at hand just as well as the others. Rather, our loss more largely was the result of their failing to see more clearly what was ahead. Had they enjoyed such vision it probably would have caused a serious breach with the foreign central bankers but the world would have been saved a vast amount of trouble. This is because if the United States had not gone along, the plans developed in these early international conferences never could have been carried out.

United States Support Necessary to the Plans.

The first of these plans was to get all the world back on the gold standard just as rapidly as possible. At the time this was considered, and quite properly, the most fundamental international financial problem confronting the world. Until it was solved, reparations and international loans necessarily must remain in a state of flux. Even the domestic policies of the nations were made more difficult by the prevailing currency instability.

In cooperating in the restoration of the gold standard in the European countries, accordingly, the United States not only was sharing a responsibility that necessarily fell upon its shoulders as the most powerful nation in the world, but as well was following a course that would bring direct benefits to it both in finance and trade. Unfortunately, however, the restoration of the standard was not wisely done. England returned at a value that, many then suspected and everyone now knows, was to subject her economy to a long period of deflation. France returned at a level favorable to herself, but disturbing to the countries with which she comes into competition in the world markets.

First Serious Problem Arose With England's Gold Reserve

In due time these errors began to take their toll. The first serious threat arose in 1927. England was being hard pressed. Her gold reserve was falling dangerously near the minimum that was viewed as essential to the maintenance of the gold standard. To meet the situation it was essential to get a flow of gold started toward London. This meant that there must be a larger differential established between her money rates and those prevailing in other markets. To get this either England must advance rates, or the other centers must lower rates. If the English rates were raised it would mean that the British economy would be subjected to more deflationary pressure. Accordingly she argued that the other nations should reduce their rates.

It was said at this point that real foresight of the inflationary dangers involved in the English proposal was needed. Unfortunately it was not present. The Federal Reserve System came to the aid of England. It did it by pumping huge sums into our money market through the purchase of Government bonds and bankers' bills.

That was the start of the inflationary movement that carried us to the precipice of 1929. Had the New York bank governor of that time—Mr. Benjamin Strong—refused to cooperate it is certain the record of the last few years would have been quite different. We would have made our adjustments from the level of 1927 rather than from the fantastic level of 1929.

Bond Market Sags Fraction As Sales Gain

Federal and Investment Issues Steady; Trading, $11,592,000.

New York, July 20 (AP).—The bond market pursued a zig-zag path today with prime investment and Government issues steady, while speculative loans declined substantially.

Transfer aggregated $11,592,000, par value, compared with $8,614,000 the day before.

Rails and Utilities.

Secondary railroad and utility issues were particularly soft and losers of around one to two points were numerous, including obligations of the Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Rock Island, Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago Great Western, St. Paul, Columbia Gas, Erie, International Telephone, Missouri Pacific, New Orleans Public Service, New Haven, Philadelphia Reading Coal & Iron, St. Louis Southwestern, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Utilities Power & Light and Western Pacific.

Prime bonds of these groups, however, held steady throughout the day. A few equaled their highs of the year and in some instances reached into new peak territory.

In Industrial Group.

In the industrial group, Liggett & Myers 5s made a new high at 115, American Beet Sugar convertible 6s equaled its 1934 high at 100 and Wilson & Co. 6s came within striking distance of its old high at 107¼. Other firm spots of the day included obligations of B. F.Goodrich, New York Steam, Pure Oil, Sinclair Consolidated Oil and California Packing.

Most of the Treasury and Liberty securities were minor fractions higher, but Home Owners Loan 4s and 3s declined slightly, as did Federal Farm Mortgage bonds.

The foreign section was mostly lower, including Australian 5s, City of Berlin 6s, Argentine 6s and Dutch East Indies 6s. Chinese Railways 5s advanced 3⅜ points to 36⅞.

Curb's Prices Forced Down Under Selling

Specialty Group Suffers Most; Trading Rises to 200,000 Shares.

New York, July 20 (AP).—Rather active selling lowered prices in every department of the curb market today. Severest declines were felt in the specialty group. Utilities, oils and alcohols eased fractions to a point or more. Metals, wnich had been steady most of the week, also succumbed to selling.

Fajardo Sugar dropped 5 points from yesterday's top price of 105. Similar losses occurred in General Tire & Rubber and Lynch Corporation, while Dow Chemical yielded nearly 4. Safety Car Heating and Tubize Chatillon were marked down about 3 points apiece.

Greyhound Corporation recorded a new high for the year in the early part of the day, but ended unchanged. Hiram Walker broke through its year's low to 28⅛, off ⅞.

Recessions of around a point or so were shown by Electric Bond & Share, International Petroleum, Gulf Oil, Newmont, Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Waco Aircraft, National Container, American Cyanamid "B" and Philip Morris Consolidated.

Sales approximated 220,000 shares, compared with 150,000 yesterday.

Wheat Plunges Downward on News of Rain

Chicago, July 20 (AP).—An abrupt downward plunge of wheat prices today took the market 4⅝ cents under high points touched earlier, and accompanied rains and cooler temperatures Northwest.

Adding to the bearish effect of moisture relief and of some abatement of heat both north and south of the Canadian border were reports that a large quantity of Argentine wheat had been sold to Europe, and was being hedged at Winnipeg.

Today's break in wheat, the first of any consequence since a pronounced upward movement of prices, got under way about two weeks ago, was regarded by many traders as being largely due to profit-taking.

Wheat Closes Nervous.

Wheat closed nervous at a moderate rally from the day's bottom level, but 1⅝ to 2⅛ below yesterday's finish; corn, unchanged to ⅜ down; oats, ⅜ to ⅝ off, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents decline.

Rains Northwest, although light, were well distributed, and there were forecasts of further showery conditions. Earlier, the wheat market here showed a decided upward trend, influenced by reports of widespread blistering heat and of increasing crop losses both of wheat and corn. In addition, the Liverpool wheat market at the time was stronger than expected, with Rotterdam and Buenos Aires sharply higher.

Unlooked-for notable weakness which showed itself in Winnipeg wheat quotations, however, had a persistent disturbing influence, and before the day was ended led not only to sharp curtailment of speculative demand in Chicago, but to execution of many stop-loss selling orders when prices here tumbled.

Action of Corn.

Contrasting with the right-about-face action of wheat was stubborn relative strength displayed by the corn market. Weather predictions indicated that abnormal heat and extraordinary lack of moisture over most of the corn belt gave no promise of any immediate relief.

Furthermore, a large percentage of corn purchased to arrive in Chicago appeared to be coming from sources which had been sealed as security for Government loans, and this was interpreted as suggesting acute shortage of supplies later on.

Difficulties in obtaining cars for corn shipments added to firmness of the corn market, and largely offset the bearish influence of wheat. Oats traders were inclined to take their cue from corn.

The Explanation.

I read some highbrow magazines in which learned men debate, explaining just what spilled the beans, and brought us to this state. I often wonder as I read how men can be so wise; the breadth and depth of every screed give me a fresh surprise. Professors in their dim abodes write essays every week, which point to us the zig-zag roads we now so vainly seek. Their merits I can well descry, they are worked out with care, and yet they are so dusty dry they drive me to despair. I sometimes wonder why most men who try to show the way, who'd teach with either voice or pen, seem tiresome, stale and gray. They seem to tell us as they write, "Observe how learned we are; our erudition is a sight to shame the brightest star. If there's a word that's obselete, that should not well survive, we try to drag it to its feet and make it seem alive. We spring some Latin here and there, and now and then some Greek, and if we make the reader's swear, their patience we bespeak. For there is sense in what we write, though it be hard to find, and we will guide you to the light if you will trail behind." I read a stretch of highbrow stuff until it makes me sick, and then I call, in accents gruff, for tales of Deadwood Dick.
